IN MY MEMORY

To my finher, Hy Kornbhlu, this book is dedicated. He taught me, through parental patience as well as his social and political commitment, the simple meaning of human decency in a world of many ills and civel that could not be ignored—as he made sure I understood. To him I owe the construct of councience and the sense of common community that has enabled this work from the first page to the last.

Introduction: History and Accountability

It is not a part of American history that we are proud of.
—Secretary of State Colin Powell, responding to a question on the morality of the U.S. role in Chile, February 20, 2003.

Just before midnight on October 16, 1998, two Scotland Yard official slipped through the falls of an elie priven elike in London and secured the room in which former Chilean dictator, General Angusto Piscochet, was recovering from back surgery. Whit English refliciency, bette disarred his private bodygasards, disconsected the phones, posted eight pelicemen outside the door, and then proceeded to serve Pruchen's with a warrant from IN courts had refused to do since the cut of his military regime in 1990—they paleded Piscochet under arreaf for criters against humanity.

General Fuschet, whose name became ynonymous with gross visitions of human rights during his sevenceropes distanching, heavy a dyst under house arrest in London. Only aggressive diglomatic intervention by Chilé-visiting governance, pressured by the Fuschets in the Chilemon military, and an adori propaganda campaign waged by his lawyers, keyt him from being exardified to Spain to sand trial for Officien exanging from neutrue to serroe inn. After sixteen mouths in detention, the British governances released the eligibly-from years of general on what it it termed "humanistarian grounds." When he returned to his homedand, however, he was aripped of his immunify from protections, indieted, and interrogled. A case point Purchet even faced the ignominious prospect of being fingerprinted and posing for a may be about histally, the Clinca course model that the to aggested and elemental Fino-chet count distort of the contract of the contract of the product of th

Pinoche cvaded punishment. But the sags of the "Pinochet Case" remains a historic milestone in the pursuis of accountability over atrocity. His arrest marked a long-awaited vindication for not only Pinochet's victims, but the victims of repression everywhere, as well as a turning point in the use of international have to pursue their repressors. It will forever be remembered as a transformational moment for the luman rights movement, and a landmark event in both Chile and the United States of Annetic States of

For the cause of human rights, the drama of Pinscher's detention has exabilisted a precedent for the plobalistonic or plastics. Now that the Pinscher case has empowered the concept of universal jurisdiction—the ability of any asset to bold gross vicintors accountable to international codes of justice—tyrants will no longer be able to leave their honelands and feel secure from the reach of international taw. For Casili, Pinscher's arrest casted this ability to repress his notical's collective memory of the horsons of his rule, and international taw. For Casili, Pinscher's arrest cased this ability to repress his notical's collective memory of the horsons of his rule, and international taw. The Casili and the horsons of his rule, and international taw. And the horsons of his rule, and international taw. The second product of the horsons of his rule, and have been horsons of his rule,

As Chileans continue to resurrect and redress their bloody and buried pass, in Washington Pinoche's arrest has also led to a massive exhumation of secret U.S. government archives. The declassified Pinochet fles not only renewed international interest in the history of his regime; they have refocused public attention on the United States's own responsibility for the denouement of democracy and the rise of distanceship in Chile.

The Other 9/11

For almost three decades, September 11 marked a day of infutury for Cilicans, Lacid Americans, and the world community—a day where Callean air force jets statcked La Monotka plake in Stansings as the preduct to the vicious copy that brought Pittochet to power, in the aftermath of "yil," zeou, a is more likely to be remembered for the shocking terrorisis attack on the World Trade Center and the Peragona. With that borror, the United States and Chile now share "that decade and date," as writer Aried Dortinon has cloparately decade." A "good in Craffold date," as writer Aried Dortinon has cloparately decade." A "good in Tubelley, once significant with off States and the Chile now share "that decades" and the Chile now share a "the Chile now share a "t

But the histories of the United States and Chile are joined by far more than the coincidence of Osama bin Laden's timing. Washington has played a pivotal role in Chile's traumatic past. Beginning in the early 1060s, U.S. policy makers initiated more than a decade of efforts to control Chile's political life, culminating in a massive covert effort to "bring down," as Richard Nixon and members of his cabinet candidly discussed, the duly elected Popular Unity government of Salvador Allende. Within hours of realizing that goal on September 11, 1073, the White House began transmitting secret messages welcoming General Pinochet to power and expressing a "desire to cooperate with the military lunta and to assist in any appropriate way." Until September 1076, when Pinochet sent a team of assassins to commit an act of international terrorism in Washington, D.C., Secretary of State Henry Kissinger steadfastly maintained a posture of avid support for the Pinochet regime. The assassination of Orlando Letelier and Ronni Moffitt on the streets of the nation's capital would dominate U.S. Chilean relations for the next decade, until the dictatorship began to unravel under growing popular pressure in Chile, and the United States fully and finally abandoned its onetime anticommunist ally. U.S. policy had an impact in changing not only the composition of Chile's government in 1979 but also the course of its violent future during the next seventeen years.

If U.S. policy has had a major influence on events in Chile, those events have returned to influence the political discourse of the United States-and indeed the world. The country that Chilean poet Pablo Neruda described as a "long petal of sea, wine and snow" holds a special place in the hearts and minds of the international community. Since the early 1060s, Chile has attracted international attention for a number of utopian political projects and economic and social experiments. In 1964, Chile became a designated "showcase" for the Alliance for Progress-a U.S. effort to stave off revolutionary movements in Latin America by bolstering centrist, middle-class, Christian Democratic political parties. But with the election of Salvador Allende on September 4, 1070, Chile became the first Latin American nation to democratically elect a socialist president. The Via Chilena-peaceful road to socialist reform-captured the imagination of progressive forces around the globe, while provoking the consternation of imperial-minded U.S. policy makers. "We set the limits of diversity," Kissinger was heard to tell his staff as the United States initiated a series of covert operations against Allende, which "at a minimum will either insure his failure," according to a SECRET Kissinger proposal to Nixon, "and at a maximum might lead to situations where his collapse or overthrow later may be more feasible."

The sharp contrast between the peaceful nature of Allende's program for change, and the violent coup that left him dead and Chile's long-standing demecratic institutions destroyed, truly shocked the world. The Pinoche regime's detactorial Dear, and alwaymal human righas record quickly became a universal political and humanitarian issus. Revelutions of CIA involvement in Alfactical voorthoon, and Washington's unbashed embrace of the Juna raised Clabe's worldwide profile even further, to a point where U.S. policy makes could no longer ignore the condemnation. 'Clabe has taken on Spaint's image in the 1940s as a symbol of rightwing tyraumy," an older spectral to Kissinger in our secretar bicking paper: 'Elake i or one, we are expected to Kissinger in our secretar bicking paper: Take it or one, we are built of the condemnation.' Clabe, "the U.S. embassy moted in a 1954 strategy and the baser opened so a 1954 strategy.

has become something of a cause celebre in both the Western and Communist worlds. What happens in Chile is thus a matter of rather special significance to the United States. Distant and small though its Chile has long been viewed universally as a demonstration area for economic and social experimentation. Now it is in a sense in the front line of world ideological conflict.

In the United States, Chile joined Vietnam on the from line of the unional condition over the comption of American values in the making and correice of U.S. foreign policy. During the mid-1970s, events in Chile generated of U.S. foreign policy. During the mid-1970s, events in Chile generated a major debate on human rights, covert action, and the proper place for both in America's conduct abroad. The Kinsingerian diseaged for Pimoderly and the property of the

Indeed, Chile became the catalyst for the first public hearing ever held on covert acion. Sentor Church's Senten Select Committee to Study Coverment Operations with Respect to Intelligence Activities—Luown as the Church Committee—conducted the first major Congressional investigation into dandestine operations and published the first case studies, Covert Admis (Chile, 1967–1973), and Allegal Austination Plats Insuling Forigo Leaders, detailing those caperations abroad. Once revealed, the US, Sportmagnes's covert campaign in Chile led to the exposure of other foreign policy excesses, seandals, and corruptions.

The findings of the Church Committee, and the public revolution of Washingnos's ongoing association with Pinnoch's butality, prompted a widespread movement to return US foreign policy to the moral precepts of American society. "Todis is just the latest example for a lot of people in this connery of the United States not being true to its values," one internal State Department neuron concelled in June 1977. The debtas remoul US, misconduct in Chile, as Richard Harris wrote in The New Yorker magazine in 1970, rated the fundamental outsion." Those did we become such a nation?

That question remains relevant to the worldwide debate over the exercise OU Spower in the townspline cumps, Indeed, a historied review of U.S. Chilean relations raises many of the same consensions issues the American people, and the international commanity, conformed as the Bland administration launched its war on Israp percupsive surfaces, regime charge, uniliserat usine hardwide of the properties of the contraction of the con

For all of Chile's importance and notoriety in the ongosing debate over U.S. foreign policy, the instoried record has reminded largely hidden from public scrutiny. The covert operations, murders, sendals, cover-ups, and control versies over harman rights whelston—all generated massive amounts of op-secret documentation. Pinode's arrest in London renewed national and international interest in the vast secret U.S. andrews on Chile. Those records—Call melligence reports, State Department cables, Defense Department analysis, NSC memoranda, among other documents—were known to contain carrordinarily detailed coverage of Fluede's streeties, the inner workings of his internal precision and said international terrories, as well as Washington's poliderate to procedure. Funches and his absorbitance—if only the Climon ministruston could be persuated to declassify thousands of less containing ters of thousands of pages of secret information compiled during Chile's military discussible.

The Cilizon White House had already pionerced a process of declassifing U.S documentation to advance the cause of human rights. During his first term, President Cilizon substricted major declassifications on El Salveot, Hondrusa, and Conternals in response to sendado over U.S miscondust and repression in those countries. On Cilia, the administration faced a choured strong and populars wives from the faulties of Pinchie's American vixims, as well as pressure from Congress to release evidence that would seek spain of the two bring Pincheet to patter. Body publicy and pressally, substriction of the property of the property of the property of the tistal Security Archive, lobbied administration officials to declassify docutores in the name of human riches issue, and history.

For a writery of political reasons, the Clinton administration resisted any policy initiative or againer that would alk Spain's unprecedured application of universal parisdiction to Pinochet's crimes. Doing nothing, however, would be perceived as proteoring the vilea of Tania Moración adiatorio in recent history. Eventually, the administration agreed to combet a "Calie Declassification Project"—note to provide decumenta to Spain but for the benefit of Chilem and American citienes. The declassification review, the State Deputted amounted in Roberty 1000, would "hospead to the expected proteon and american citienes. The declassification review, the State Declassification proteons."

To its credit, the Clinton administration palled, prodded, and pushed the secrecy system into divulging significant amounts of information. Under the leadership of Secretary Madeleine Albright, the State Department appreciated the need for thorough declassification to advance human rights and historical honesty; the National Archives (in charge of presidential papers), the NSC, Penagon, and Justice Department in descending degrees also cooperated in the project. But the "securocrast" in the CL3—the agency with the most revealing documentation to offer, but also the most secrets to hide—proved to be particularly reclarizant. For months, Agency officials suggest to withbold any document demonstrating covers U.S. involvement in the death of demoncricy and rise of detacated just Chile. A special interactionment to the Intelligence Act in 1990 required the Agency to produce a written report for gapled IIII on its overor operations. The Calle Declassification Project yielded some 2,200 CLR records. In dation, approximately 3,800 White Insue, National Security Conzol., Pentagon, and FBI records were released, along with 18,000 State Depart ment documents that shed considerable light on Plunchet's resortenery are dictatorable as well as U.S. policies and actions in Calle between 1970 and 1930. Indeed, the documents contain new information on virtually every major issue, episode, and scandal that pockmark this controversial era. The documents also permit a reexamination of many if not all of the outstanding questions that haunt this history. Questions such as:

- What role did the United States actually play in the violent September 11, 1973, coup that brought Augusto Pinochet to power?
- What motivated President Nixon and his National Security Adviser Henry Kissinger to authorize and oversee a campaign to overthrow and undermine Chilean democracy?
 - What support did the CIA covertly provide to help the Pinochet regime consolidate? What assistance did the CIA give to the murderous secret police, DINA?
- Were U.S. officials negligent, or possibly complicit, in the execution of Charles Horman, an American citizen detained by the Chilean military following the coup whose case became the subject of the Hollywood movie, Mixing?
- What did U.S. intelligence know about Operation Condor, the Chilear-led network of Southern Cone secret police agencies that organized international acts of state-sponsored terrorism to eliminate critics of their regimes?

- Could U.S. officials have detected and deterred the September 21, 1976, car-bombing that kilked Orlando Letelier and Romii Karpen Mofitte—the most egregious act of international terrorism committed in Washington, D.C. before the September 11, 2001, attack on the Pentason?
- And, in the end, what role did Washington play in the denouement of General Pinochet's dictatorship?

It was a "seare campaig" that relied heavily on images of Soviet unbas and clothan firing quada and was directed expectally to women. Hundreds of thousands of opios of the autonomuman pastoral exter of Pape Phis XI were distributed by Christian Desources organizations... "Dotropical to the contract of the contract of the contract of the originate from another source, such as the Chilean Communis Party were used as well-."

In the several months before the Spotember 1964 election, these operations reached a crescented of activity. One CIA prospagand group, for example, was distributing 9,000 anticommunity political posters and produing merral-polar radio news spost oby, as well as neversyste weekly news commentates—all directed at turning Colitican voters away from Allender and soward Behards For: The CIA, as the Clumber Committee report need, regarded this prospagands campsign, "as the most effective activity undertaken by the U.S. on behard of the Christian Democratic candidates."

"All polls favor Eduardo Frei over Salvador Allende," Secretary of State Dean Rusk reported in a recently declassified "TOP SECRET—EXCLUSIVE DIS-TRIBUTION" memorandum for President Lyndon Johnson dated August 14, 1064, three weeks before the election: We are making a major overt effort to reduce chances of Chile being the first American country to cleet an award Marrait president. Our well-concaeled program embraces special economic assistance to assure stability, aid to the armed forces and police to maintain order, and political action and propaganda tied closely to Frei's campaign. [emphasis in orieitall]

The CIA would subsequently credit these covert operations with helping Frei to an overwhelming 57 percent majority victory on September 4, 1964—a margin unheard of in Chile's typical three-way presidential races.

With Fers' selection, the Johnson administration declared Chile *a showcase for the Alliance for Progress." But Washington faced the same dilemma it had faced in 1938—If Fers' spolicies failed to assusin social and economic development Chiletan voters would turn to Alfende's leftist condition in the 1970 election. The U.S., therefore, enabathed on a massive program of economic, military, and covert political assistance.
Almost overeinth, Chile became the leading recipion of U.S. aid in Latin America. Between 1062 and 1070, this country of only ten million people received over 1.2 billion dollars in economic grants and loans-an astronomical amount for that era. In addition, AID pressured major U.S. corporations, particularly the two copper giants, Anaconda and Kennecott, which dominated the Chilean economy, to modernize and expand their investments and operations. Since Frei's main appeal to many Chilean voters was his policy of "Chileanization"-partial nationalization of the copper industry-the U.S. government offered the corporations what Ambassador Edward Korry called "a sweetheart deal," providing "political risk insurance" for investments and assets in Chile. Meant to mobilize private capital in uncertain investment climates, the program was first administered through AID, and later a new quasi-governmental organization called the Overseas Private Investment Corporation (OPIC). In 1969, OPIC's $400 million of political risk coverage in Chile not only dwarfed its programs in all other nations, but far exceeded its actual holdings. The program created a further U.S. political and economic incentive to block the appeal of an Allende candidacy in 1970.

U.S. miliarry assistance programs also dramatically increased during the righos. Although Chile faced no internal or external security threat, military aid usualed Sq1 million between 1962 and 1970—a clear effort to establish closer ties to the Chilean generals. A Congressional survey of security saistance programs in Latin America determined that such assistance to Chile are present and cosmonic in nature, rather than simply military. ⁷⁰

And the CIA continued its covert intervention through political action and propaganda operations. Between 1965 and 1970, the Agency spent $2 million on some twenty projects designed to enhance the Christian Democrats and undermine Allende's political coalition. In February 106s, for example, the Agency was authorized to spend $175,000 on direct funding of select candidates in the March Congressional elections; nine CIA-backed candidates were elected, and thirteen FRAP candidates the CIA had targeted for defeat lost. In July 1068, $950,000 was approved for influencing the 1060 congressional elections; ten of twelve CIA-selected candidates won. The Santiago Station also provided surreptitious funding to Frei's party for two years following his election, and developed assets in his cabinet, as well as within the military. Funds were provided to church organizations and pro-U.S. labor agencies. New media assets were developed, including those who "placed CIA-inspired editorials almost daily in El Mercaria," according to the Church Committee report. The propaganda mechanisms developed during the 1060s, in particular, put the CIA in a strong position to influence the threeway 1070 presidential campaign, which pitted Allende's new coalition, Unidad Popular (UP) against former president Jorge Alessandri, and Radomiro Tomic of the Christian Democrat party.

By 1970, the United States had a major political and economic state in preventing Allender from becoming Child per societies. Indeed, this accession to that office would signify the abject failure of a promoted and concerted US, object to undermite his societies appeal, indeed, the tem year binsoyr of US, over and covert serious and investments in Chile del far more than simply set a precedent for Perfection Nison's decision to formet a cost against Allende; it created what Ambassador Kerry called a "facticiary responsibility" an imperial sense of obligation and cutilemen—to-overtum the democratic decision of the Chilenn electorate. As Korry par is: The question was 'not saying websterly, but thow and whether US, would interved.

"Extreme Option": Coup Contingencies

In his memoirs, Henry Kissinger identified Chilean millionaire, cower and publisher of B Mercian and distribution for the Perjaces Co., Apusin Edwards, as the catalyst of Richard Nixon's September 15 orders for a coap. "By den Noxon had actar, a personal role," he wires in Wilder Haur Nixon 14 and Lange personal role, "he wires in Wilder Haur Nixon's He had been triggered into action on September 14 by Agastin Edwards, the publisher of B Meroin, the more respected Chilean daily nevergaper, who had come to Washington to warm of the consequences of an Allende takeover. Edwards was sarings and the touse Obn Kendell, the chief executive officer of Papic Cola, who by chance was bringing his father to see Noxon that very day."

Through Kendall, who was one of Nixon's dosest friends and biggsort contributors, Ebbard apixed a role in fooming the president's suggression on Mictole. On the unoming of Squenzher 15, Edwards nut with Kissinger and Antoney General Mixed for benealists and briefly defend to me on the threat Allende posed to his and other per-American business interess. On Kissinger's instructions, Henha had also me with Edwards in a downtown Washingson hotel. In a deposition before the Church Committee—will dash saided after more than twenty-eight years—Fillens stated that it was his in: pression "that the President called this "Sprember 15] meeting for order a complexesse of Edwards persencin Washingson and white he heard from Kendall about what Edwards was saying about conditions in Chile and what was homeonic thereof.

But the declassified record demonstrates that the White House, CIA, Saste Department, and the Pentagnon had already been preproting and evaluating coup contingencies for weeks before Nixon issued his directive. As early as August 9, a full month before the election, Assistant Secretary of Siste John Crimmins sent Ambassador Korry a secret 'eyes only' abbe regarding on tingency options in the event of Allende's election. "As you can see," it read, "there are three contoins in Sexenders 19.

We want you also to consider a fourth which we are treating separately with very restricted redistribution. This option would be the overthrow or prevention of the inauguration. We would like to have your views on

- A. Prospects of Chilean military and police who would take action to overthrow Allende....
 - B. Which elements of the military and police might try and overthrow.
 C. Prospects for success of military and police who try and overthrow
 - Allende or prevent his inauguration.

 D. The importance of U.S. attitude to initiate or success of such an operation.⁹

Korry's response, partially declassified thirty years later, provided a remarkably detailed analysis of the vitrous decision scenarios, U.S. options, and expectations. His thirteenpage cable identified all the key elements that would figure in the often-tomic govern from so not pullcate the key similar to would figure in the often-tomic govern from so not pullcate the key intermediate. For intermediate, the continues the continues and the continues are all the continues that the prediction of the storage constitutionalists position of Chileran communiformity that General René Schmieker, which Korry called the "Schmieker Dourines". of Nonintervention;" and the identification of retired General Roberto Viaux as the military figure most predisposed to move against Allende."

This secret inquiry into the potential for a military coup came as the intelligence community was concluding a "review of U.S. policy and arranges in the event of an Allende vienoy" for the White House. On Khiniger, and Defense Department unalpsis conducted a majorior order, CAA. Saste, and Defense Department unalpsis conducted as majorior sundy into the implications for the United States. The intelligence assessment whey produced in mid-August was called National Security Stocky Memorana dum op." "Regarding thrents to U.S. interests," NSSM op stated dearly, "we conclude them."

- The U.S. has no vital national interests within Chile. There would, however, be tangible economic losses.
- The world military balance of power would not be significantly altered by an Allende government.
- An Allende victory would, however, create considerable political and psychological costs:
 - a. Hemispheric cohesion would be threatened by the challenge that an Allende government would pose to the OAS, and by the reactions that it would create in other countries. We do not see, however, any likely threat to the peace of the region.
 - An Allende victory would represent a definite psychological setback to the U.S. and a definite psychological advance for the Marxist idea.¹³

"In examining the potential threat posed by Allende," the review for Kissinger added, "it is important to bear in mind that some of the problems foreseen for the United States in the event of his election are likely to arise no matter who becomes Chile's next president."

NSM of concluded that an Alknole decision curried no military, strategic or regional threat to U.S. increas in security and stability, but the report no contained a previously unfailablood "overt names." A secret CIA supplement until the "Extreme Opion—Overthrow Allendes," addressed the assumptions, such disadvantages, and disadvantages of intempting to foster a military coup. "This extreme that the contract of the made to remure that the role for the United States was not revealed, and so would require that the action be the United States was not revealed, and so would require that the action be attacked most official minimations. coup would almost certainly permanently relieve us of the possibility of an Allende government in Chile."

But there were clear disadvantages as well. The most important, according to this analysis, was that

There is almost no way to evaluate the likelihood that such an attempt would be successful even were it made. An unsuccessful attempt, in wolving as it probably would revelation of U.S. participation, would have grave consequences for our relations with Chile, in the hemisubere, in the United States and elsewhere in the world."

Even if the coup did succeed, these analysis noted in a president observation, there was another drawback: Where the overthrow effort to be successful, and even were U.S. participation to remain covert—which we cannot assume—the United States would become a hostage to the elements we backed in the overthrow and would probably be out off for years from most other political flores in the country."⁵⁵

But almost every member of the embassy and intelligence community shared the opinion that fostering a coup in Chile in the fall of 1070 was a nearly impossible, diplomatically dangerous, and undesirable operation. At the September 8 meeting of the high-level national security team known as the 40 Committee that oversaw covert operations, Kissinger and CIA director Helms confronted the State Department argument that a more effective approach would be to focus on rebuilding the Christian Democratic Party for the 1076 Chilean election. The minutes of the meeting record Helms's acknowledgement "that there was no positive assurance of success [of a coup] because of the apolitical history of the military in Chile" but, in any case, "a military golde against Allende would have little chance of success unless undertaken soon." Kissinger also voiced his "considerable skepticism that once Allende is in the presidency there would be anyone capable of organizing any real counterforce against him." He requested "a cold blooded assessment of . . . the pros and cons and prospects involved should a Chilean military coup be organized now with U.S. assistance." (Doc 4)

Ambassador Korry's response was quick and unequivocal. On September 12 he cabled the State Department:

We believe it now clear that Chilean military will not, repeat not move to prevent accession barring unlikely situation of rational chaos and widespread violence. . . . What we are saying in this "cold-blooded assessment" is that opportunities for further significant U.S.G. action with the Chilean military are nonexistent. (Doc 5) On September 25, Korry again cabled Kissinger to reiterate, "I am convinced we cannot provoke [a coup] and that we should not run the risks simply to have another Bay of Pies."

CIA Chief of Station in Santiago, Henry Hecksher, who used the code name "Felix," provided an equally negative assessment. On September o, six days before Nixon's decision. Hecksher received a special cable from the CIA's head of the Western Hemisphere William Broe that demonstrates the CIA's early preparation, apparently with White House urging, for plotting a coup. "The only prospect with any chance of success whatsoever is a military gulte either before or immediately after Allende's assumption of power," Broe advised. He instructed the CIA Station to undertake "the operational task of establishing those direct contacts with the Chilean military which are required to evaluate possibilities and, at least equally important, could be used to stimulate a golbe if and when a decision were made to do so," (Doc 6) The Chief of Station immediately began to implement this order but his reports back to headquarters contained multiple caveats on the difficulties in accomplishing this mission. "Forget about black operations and propagandistic conditioning of Armed Forces. They barely read," Hecksher cabled Langley on September 23, "Bear in mind that parameter of action is exceedingly narrow and available options are quite limited."14 "I had left no doubt in the minds of my colleagues and superiors." Hecksher would later secretly testify before the Church Committee, "that I did not consider any kind of intervention in those constitutional processes desirable."

In Washington, other officials presented even more comprehensive argumens aspaint the Noom Kaisinger come of covert action in Chile. In late September, a member of the CLA's Directorate of Operations assessed the Cold War convention wisdom that US, officials had applied to Chile. Far from being a pown of the Communities, be argued, 'Allende will be hard for the Communitae Fraya and for Moscow to counted.' Moscower, 'Allende was the Communities Fraya and for Moscow to counted.' Moscower, 'Allende was exceptingly by any means.' Covert operations to sup. Allende from becoming precision, this analyst trackical, would be vorce plan under Any indication that we are behind a legal mickey mouse or some hardmoned play will exceptate relations over further with the new government. I am afraid that we will be repeating the errors we made in 1959 and 1960 when we drove Field Castro in the Soviet camp. If successful for the moment in derrying the UP its candidate, we would bring upon ourselves a much more disagerous civil war in Chile... and a much worse image throughout Laint American and the world." Similar arguments were on Henry Kissinger's dock even before Nono gree his oder to formet a coup. In the time evening of Septimer 4, the day of Allende's election, Kissinger's top side on Latin America, Viron Valy, of Allende's election, Kissinger's top side on Latin America, Viron Valy, seat him a rows-text colle arging that "is in fir non proven that wisdom woodl call for covert action programs, the consequences could be dissustent. The cost benefitier in mois to not feverable." On September 14, Valy pre-seated Kissinger with a sector/1 systemy memoratum unmarating a CAI position paper on Calle along with analysical comment, conclusions, and recommendations. "Minitary action is impossible," Valy reported. "We have no cipability in moviewe no insignite, a coupl', la vorce, and "my coverer effort to simulate a military taleover is a sometime." Success in blocking continuous control of the cont

Somewhat more courageously, Vaky questioned whether the dangers of an Allende government outweighed the dangers and risks of the probable chain of events Washington would set in motion through covert intervention. He provided this answer:

What we propose is patendy a violation of our own principles and policy tenets. Moralism aside, this has practical operational consequences.... If these principles have any meaning, we normally depart from them only to meet the gravest threat to us, e.g. to our survival. Is Allende a moral threat to the U.S.? It is hard to argue this:⁶¹

Track I and Track II

In Chile, Laini America, and Washington, Sabrador Allende's election on Spenther et was a momentum even. His venery set off infruit, virtually minute by-minute reaction within the Nison administration. On election that Anhanasador Edward Korry set ma for beet than eighten qualettee on the vote count. Then were followed by doors of lengthy, verbox calebe—Larow in the Department on "Korrygrams" for their unique language and rather tized, mire, and imposent 'duranter of the centries Clinitism Democrats, and the "myopsis of arrogan stapidity" of Click's right-wing upper class for allowing Alfende to win. "Leadership depends upon, if I may use Spanish, olders, overas, and cline for their heart of the contribution of the contribution of the design of the contribution of the contribution of the contribution of the contribution of the design of the contribution of the contribution of the contribution of the design of the contribution of the contribution of the contribution of the design of the contribution of the con in a September 5 cable titled "Allende Wins." "In Chile they counted upon chachara (chauer)."

Over the next several weeks, the ambassador sent a constant serice of security/corosa cables with act this as "No Hopes for Grid" and "Some Hope for Chile". A number of his field reports identified what Korry akperletical yadied "Me Rade Goddlerg contrapion," or "an undercover organicially said with the contrapion of the contrapion of the contrapion of the Chilene Congress on Copuler 2s. Through covert political means, the Chilene Congress on Copuler 2s. This setteme was the initial Beloppiris for what the CAL Golde "Track I"—De syntamentary solutions." Track II became the internal designation for operations in the sit of the contrapion o

The origins of Track I date back to Just 18, 1970, when Ambassador Kerry proposed that the 40 committee Backeas a contingency whath fund of Segoosco to bribe members of the Chilesto Congress as "Phase I Fare III of Segoosco by India generation" against Almede II no candiable were an angior properties of the Chilesto Compared to the committee of the Chileston I for the committee of the Chileston I for the committee of the Chileston I for the world need mixteen additional votes controlled by the Christian Democrats, and could conceivably be radial even if he were the numer-up. Kerry's concern was not assume that the US-controlled crought worse among the Christian Democrats to blook Afface. The numer up was approved, but distribution was in:

On Sprember 14, the 40 Committee authorised Korry to spend the Sp5,000 for "Overs support of projects which Frier is his raused team deem important." However, the embassy and the CIA soon realized that the poternial for exposure made britlery operations too risk!—one leak would provoke an amit-American backbash throughout Châle's nationalist political system. The bribery plan was absulanced, but the U.S. continued to overely pressure the military and the Christian Democrats to orchestrate the so-called Frier refereions gambin." Which also you of Allende's election, Ambussador Korry was meeting with Châlen gazerel Camilo Valenzeels to promote a plan whereby the rumer-pa, Alexanadri, would be railide; the would form a millitary collate and resign; and the military would oversee new elections between Prix and Allende. But this plan also considered "a somatter," after somatters. the CIA determined that there was no way to siphon off enough Congressional votes to ratify Alessandri.

By mid Separaber the embossy and the CIA were pursuing a scheme that a nanomated to little more than a Frie-submotted military coap. This plant called for Frie to order the (1) resignation of his cobinet; (a) formation of a new cobinet composed entirely of military planters; (a) appointment of an acting president, and (a) Frei's departure from Chile, leaving the contary under Gelickive military corted. This neurosc a solar accopy for CA, status report stated, "would ultimately depend on Frei's total commitment to follow through."

Therein by the main problem for the success of Truck I—Ferk's waverling unwillingness to berry Chile's long-aming tradition of evil, constitutional role. Knory, who met secrely with Fei and his intermediary, Defense Min seer Resardo Nas, gravitated breven landing the president as the "one and only one hope for Chile," and dispuraging him as a man "with no parts on." At the CLA, David Alex Frillipse quentle problematic possibilities of a coup poir based on the voluntarian of Chile's respected president to assertise in courty's asserted emercative radious." The first and fundamental task," he wrote in a September 3 collect to the Station, "is to induce Feri to task action which will produce desiried remains."

After this we get fuzzy since we have no clear understanding of what we wish Feei to do other than lead the military coup himself, something we can hardly expect of this too gentle soul. We can wisfully aspire to have him act in a manner which will not only exacerbate climate for a coup but which will actively precipitate it.

According to the declassified "Report on CAI Chileon Task Force Activitses," the CAI "modified an interchetory golisical action and propaganda campaign designed to good and entice Ferd "into sexting this comp plan in motion. The most superficial of these opentions ranged from planting false stricks in nevespaces around the world stating that the Communius plantand of dectary Peri as an individual and applicat leater after Allende [took] office"—and then having Frei directly informed of such susrise—to orcherating a series of decigarns to als wise from Existions women's groups in other Lain American nations beseeching her to help save the region from the horrors of communius, (One CAI cold too "Track I, dand Cotaber 19, reported that "among influences moving Frei to subopt stronger course is wideden change in daracteer of Mns. Feri") For more sitiater and violent "sudden change in daracteer of Mns. Feri") For more sitiater and violent operations designed to "influence Frei's frame of mind" were conducted in tangent with Track II coup plotting.

The historical distinction kerween Track I and Track II—that the fix forwerd a constitutional approach and the second focused on an illustry copy to block Allende—is insacurate. Track I quickly evolved to focus on a militury takewer as well—what the CAN's deputy director for cover operations (DDP) Tom Kamnessines called "a quiet and hopefully noroboticu militury one)" In a Separather a calcel occuring both Tracks I and II the CAN Track or and III to CAN Track Track III and the CAN Track I and III to CAN Track exercise is to preven Allende assumption of power. Parliamentary kegrolemain has been discarded. Militury solution is objective."

The main difference between the two approaches was that Tack I required Fer's participation and involved Ambassador Korry's fiftens to pressure the Callean president to give a green light to the Callean mailtony. Track I floosated on identifying any Chalean mallary officer, saired ways or reized, willing to lead a violent plotth, and providing whatever intentive, rational, willing to lead a violent plotth, and providing whatever intentive, rational, excessful overthrow of Callean democracy. The Track II composers of Project PUBLIT was highly compartmentalized, most menthers of the Q-to-Countitive were not aware of its existence. (Following a Committee meeting, Me were the proposers of the control of the Callean Callean and the Callean form of the Callean Callean and the Callean and the Callean and the consorting-table of PUBLIT (3) on Norm of outer, Ambassador Korry and his saff were excluded from knowledge and participation in this set of operations."

Track II operations began with Boot's Seprember q cable to Hecksher, and accelerated with Noon's Seprember 1; annulare The Chile That Force, which also coordinated Track I, immediately set up a special communication channel with the drief of Sustion. Additional agents were displaced to Sustion, Studies and genes were displaced to Sustion stepach. To DDF Karmanisme, WHIC Boot, and Task Force Chief David Alder Phillips began meeting every day; the Task Force kept a day of section, and fill feft representations reports on the stams of the Chile operations. "Under "constant, constant, just constants pressure ... from the White House," seconding to CAI officials, Karmanisme periodically briefed Kissinger and his depany Alexander Haig on the progress of fomensing a military coap in CAI.

GIA pursued a basic three-step plan: (1) identify, consact, and collect inelligence on coup-minded officers; (2) inform them that the U.S. was committed to "full support in coup" short of sending the marines; and (3) foster the creation of "a coup climate by propaganda, disinformation and terrorist activities" to provide a stimulus and percent for military to move.

Even before Nixon's coup directive, the chief of Station had begun to contact select members of the Chilean military. But the Station had limited access and no close relations within the officer corps. (The second "Situation Report" on Track II refers to a CIA inquiry to all its covert operatives for anyone with prior contacts among the Chilean military.) Indeed, at the initiation of Project FUBELT, the CIA had only two "assets"-paid agentsin the Chilean military. For that reason, the Agency recruited the services of the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) military attaché in Chile, Colonel Paul Wimert, who, according to a Task Force Report "enjoyed unusually close, frank, and confidential relationships" with potential coup plotters. On September 20. Wimert received a secret message from the DIA acting director. Lt. Gen. Jamie Philpott, sent via the CIA's Chile Task Force, ordering him to "work closely with the CIA chief . . . in contacting and advising the principal military figures who might play a decisive role in any move which might, eventually, deny the presidency to Allende. Do not, repeat not, advise the Ambassador." Wimert was instructed."

The CLA also mobilized a small eftic unit of four special agents—known as "false flaggers," or the "fliggal seam." These operatives, "fusions for their ability to assume non-US nationality," according to internal CLA summaries of Track. It, operated under externe deep covers, posing as Spanish speaking Latin Americans; their use was intended for "those contacts with the highest hap norming, that is, those individuals solven cordentials, reliability, and security quotient were unproven and unknown"—on safeguard against expose. "Headquarent proposed exhibiting small staff of his left, offere in Starings on handle high risk target of opportunity activities," records the September 38 octory in the CLAVs daily loo of Track II.

Togother, Hecksher, Wimert, and the fash-flag officers made some now down conscious with Kullean miliary and police officials from the September to late Cooker. The message passed to all of them was that the United Stease intended to cut miliary assistance to Cline lunes she upmoved against Allerde, and that the U.S. desired, and would actively support, a coup. As the leads, and that the U.S. desired, and would actively support, a coup. As the thority in Washington has substoried you to offer material support short of armed intervention to Clinkan mande forces in any redetwom they may turn detrake to prevent the election of Allerde on October π_A his imaguration on λ . Normales, or his subsequent overdrow."

Initially, the CIA targeted several active duty officers, among them Brig. Gen. Camilo Valenmela, commander of the Santiago barracks, air force General Josaquin Garciá, and a high commander of Cilile's police forces, the Carabineros, believed to be General Vicense Huerta as likely coup leaders. They also evaluated the potential of reited General Arturo Marshall, a fanatical extremsis dedicated to errorism that included bombings in Santiago and the actual assassination of Allende. But, in the Station's opinion, the "only military leader of national stature [who] appears commuted to denying Allende the presidency by force" was Roberto Viaux, a disgruntled commander who had attempted a takeover in 10f0 a gainst Feri.

Yet coup plotting remained problematic, Ceneral Viaux was retired after his unsuccessful coup attempt and therefore commanded no actual troops; one high-level CIA source discounted him as a "man who could lead a coup attempt that fails with resulting carnage." General Marshall, who the CIA met with and passed funds to, was quickly deemed too unstable and contact was dropped "because of his extremist tendencies," according to CIA reporting. And the active-duty officers were immobilized by their own commander in chief. Ceneral René Schneider, who had publicly stated his position in support of a constitutional transfer of power. "While Frei has been exploring with the military the possibilities for intervening, and realizes that Ceneral Schneider is the major stumbling block," noted a CIA special situation report dated October 2, "he has not yet been able to muster the courage to neutralize Schneider or send him out of the country." Frei. David Atlee Phillips complained in a cable to the Santiago Station the same day, "is waiting for the military to depose him. However, the constitutionalist-minded Chilean military are waiting for Frei to give them instructions to stage a coup. Thus, they are in a stalemate." In another cable three days later, the Task Force director predicted "only economic chaos or serious civil disorder is likely to alter the military posture."

"Flashpoint for Action": Creating a Coup Climate

To implement President Nixon's order to foment a coup, the C1A faced what Descreat Helm described a "the impossible" challenges of foring President Frei to move against the democratic attractures of his own nation, "neutral rings" if necessary, 10-kBs *respected commander in chiefe, Certaral Schnieder, and overcoming what agency records called "the apolitical, constitutional oriented increas of Cellisian malitary." Moreover, there existed no reason, no juntification, not even a prescreat for the military to move no block Allende's not provide the properties of the military to move to block Allende's Cellisian were as peace with the outcome of thirt political process. "Plems is now to peg for a military move," as the Sation reported on September 20, "in face of the complete calm prevailing throughout the constraints."

In the most sinister set of operations related to Tracks I and II, the CIA, with the help of the embassy and the White House, actively set out to change trangularly mue turmod in order to foster a "cong climate" in Clabe. The objective was to imagine and successorous crisa and update-off the randow the military would be prompted to act. "We conclude that it is on active the military would be prompted to act. "We conclude that it is one and to create such a climate climating with a sold percent about fillower to military and the persistent to take some action in the desired direction." Bore and Philips informed the Sarnings States on September 28 in a called that provides a covert hataprint for how the CLi intended to formet a cong in Chile, (Das "P) "We shauld direct our attention in a systematic fastion to the child of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract fill of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract fill of the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of fill of the contract of the c

The three "thrusts" for the "creation of comp dimnet" consisted of "conomic warfare," political warfare," and "psychological warfare. If successful in "heightening sension" through those three sets of operations, the CIA strategists suggested, a present for a comp would somehow personn intell—"the cone act that will force massive Communities reaction and or public ourage," as Broce and Phillips hoped and predicted. "We can be looking for the opportunity and when the time comes sensit is."

From the first day of Project FUPELT, real and theesteed economic pressure were considered key components of coap strategy—"m make the conomy scream," in NSton's sowe famous words. Simution Report #1, for excumple, called for the CLA to "begin immediately to determine just what economic pressure tactise can be employed." In a special calle to Kinsinger, who was traveling with the president in Europe in carly October, Richard Helms mored that "a suddenly disastrous economic sinuation would be the most logical pretext for a military move," and that "the outper preciols way to create the time atmosphere in which Peri could muster the courage to as it to see to it that the Chilen excooms, precious rough since the election, takes a drastic turn for the wone." According to Helms: "At least a mini-crisis is rountied."

Both CAI and State Dipartment officials evaluate the support and help of U.S. Inhimeters with interests in Chile. In the September, Korry convexed an enhanya meeting with a large group of corporate representatives to discuss the situation. He also one with a Peri intermediatry, Defense Minister Osas, and paused a dramatic warning. "Not a mut or bot will be allowed to reach Chile under Allotte. We shall deal which our powers occordism." Chile Chile the Chile of the Chile of the Chile of the Chile of the Chile believe that there will be much of an alternative to utter misery, such as seeing Chile middle through, would be actived Wissonian."

In a discussion with one unidentified official, Korry discussed a series of hostile economic steps that might contribute to a rapid slowdown in the economy and provoke a military reaction. On September 24, Korry cabled Washington with a number of ideas and proposals: starting rumors of imminent rationing to create a "run on food stocks;" asking U.S. banks to suddenly halt renewal of credit to Chile; getting "U.S. companies here to foot-drag to maximum possible . . . hold off on orders, on deliveries of spare parts": spreading false information that Chilean building and loan associations were near bankruptcy, and pressing several major U.S. corporations to declare publicly that they were closing down their Chilean operations. Korry followed up on September 25, with an additional list of recommendations that included putting pressure on the U.S. mining giant, Anaconda Copper, to take a hard line on an ongoing miners strike; circulating propaganda that an Allende government would seek to block "technical and managerial talent" from leaving Chile, spurring an exodus of such personnel now; pressuring Ford Motor Co. to pull out of Chile, and Bank of America to close its doors, which in Korry's opinion, "would provide sharp blow to Chilean banking circles and dry up one source of credit."44

High-level State Department officials did meet with corporate executives at Ford and Bank of America to enlist their support. The CIA, in turn, stepped up its collaboration with the most anti-Allende of U.S. corporationsthe International Telephone and Telegraph Co. ITT had holdings of $153 million in Chile-it owned the telephone company, two Sheraton hotels, and Standard Electric among other properties-making it the third largest American conglomerate in that nation. Certainly ITT was the most interventionist. In mid-fuly, weeks before Allende's election, ITT board member and former CIA director John McCone had placed a call to his successor, Richard Helms, and suggested ongoing communications and collaboration between ITT and the CIA to undermine Allende's candidacy. A series of high-level meetings ensured, according to leaked corporate papers, including a meeting on September 11 between McCone, Helms, and Kissinger during which IIT offered $1 million "for the purpose of assisting any [U.S.] government plan . . . to stop Allende."13 On September 20, the CIA's William Broe met with ITT senior vice president Edward Cerrity to "explore the feasibility of possible actions to apply some economic pressure on Chile." While the CIA has not released its memorandum of conversation on this meeting-one of some forty contacts between highest-level CIA and ITT of ficials on Chile in 1970 and 1971-Cerrity's report to company CEO Harold Ceneen stated that the CIA official had presented a plan "aimed at inducing economic collapse" in Chile.4 In a phone call to Geneen the same day, the CIA supervisor of Project FUBELT, Tom Karamessines, covered the same issues.

As part of the campaign of economic pressure, the CIA also pushed for direct pressure against other misper consuries with strong economic test to Calle. On the ever Persident Nion's reneeming in London with Patish Prince Minister Edward Heath, Helms sent a colde to Kissinger concerning "the Blinkish Point in Chilena economic senter." In Washington, Korry's advice was ignored, and Kissinger immediately overruled the ambassador's orders to the CIA. At the 40 Committee meeting of October 6, Kissinger directed that Korry's instructions to cease all contacts with the Chilean military be "rescinded forthwith."

At the same October 6 meeting, Kissinger pressed the CAA to instigute the coup. He pointed out that "there were only eightent days left and that some drastic action was called for to shock the Chileans into action." His pressure resulted in a sharply worded Chile Task Force directive to the Station the next day. This unique cable, signed for emphasis by the DCA, Richard Helhar, ordered the Station to "sponsor a military move" using "all available assets and strategems" to create a corp distinse: "Every hope cooms," the cable stated; "all other considerations are secondary." In his initial meetings with the Viaux compirators, Sforza obtained details on their needs and military strategy. Among the equipment the retired general requested was riot control and crowd dispersal weapons and immediate U.S. assistance after the new regime was installed. "Viaux expects some 10,000 casualties in Santiago area before leftist mobs are put down," the false flagger reported to Hecksher. In his analysis, the Station chief predicted the evolution of events that Viaux's coup effort would set in motion:

He can split armed forces, with certain army units siding with him and others rallying around Schmider, i.e. Allende. Militant effectives of Unidad Popular will side with loyalist troops. Strength estimates as to opposing camps speculative to warrant serious effort. Fenceitters will watch tide of battle before engaging themselves on either side. Camage could be considerable and prolonged, i.e. civil war.

"You have asked us to provoke chaos in Chile," Hecksher's cable concluded.
"Thru Viaux solution, we provide you with formula for chaos which is unlikely to be bloodless."*

The Assassination of General Schneider

It was Ambassador Korry who first pointed out on September 21, 1970 that to block Alknofe's seasonism to the presidency, "General Schmider would have to be neutralized, by displacement if necessary." The commander in the field, and his "Schmider borning" of nonintervention in Client politics, constituted "the main barrier to all plans for the military to take over the spectrum," according to CLR reporting, "What does Vaune plan to do to neutralize the Alho Mando [High Command]? What is to keep Schmider to making sacuratin in early hours wholl will free robe multilary teachers who might otherwise join Vaune?" CLR headquarters colled the Sainton on "remove" General Schmider, "Supplying we or Sainton can do to effect the removal of Schmider? We know this [is a] rehorical question but want to inspire thought no both each on this manter."

The answer was to islump him. On Coober 7, the U.S. milliory statckle, Colonel Winner, first diseased this iden with members of Colie's war rand-emy, a military institution headed by General Alfredo Camales who would become an active coup plotter. On Coober 8, the CLA Scation chief also discussed the possibility of Schurickie's "abduction" with a high ranking mem for Glich's Cardinore optice. The files finggers, Stores and MecMasters, bad discussions with the Visux group about a leiding plot. On Coober 13, a Visux propresentaive called to report that an "atterngs will be made to remove General Schneider within the next forty-eight hours" in order to precipions a coap.

On paper, the plan to bidaup Schneider appeared to potentially all amnecous brids with one stone. It removed the most powerful opponent of a gely-front the top military pour that post would then be filled with a military figure sympathetic to a cough the kindinging would be balled not leftist extremiss, undermining Allende's integrity; and the ensuing public ourage would create the "one" one of military and the insplication the CEA had been seeking for a military takeover. The problem confronting the CEA was whether Vitax actually had the shilty to pull off a bidapoping and a military pated.

In the early meetings with Visux, he demanded that the falls tlaggerapopoporisely referred to as "sponsors" in the cable traffice-rabilist their boan field by air dropping weapons to his group and providing the plotters with "file and ply-sock disability pelecies momentarily," and E-vating-Sastion with "file and ply-sock disability pelecies unmentarily," and E-vating-Sastion policies up to Sgoone U.S. currency and vewary other policies up to $5,000.0. "The prospects for a coup may have improved significantly in the last wenty-four hours," states the October 14 task force log on Track II. With active duty officers now involved in coup plotting, the ClA Task Force bearme concerned that Viana might move precipiously, and underest changes for a successful military operation. "It became evident," the ClA Task Force postmorten on Track II noted, "that Viana did not have the organization or support to carry out a successful cup but might trigger permanently an action that would spoil the better chances of doing so from within the active military itself."

Faced with a taxical decision on whether to try to get Visux to bold off and active-duty officers were ready, the CLA came under renewed pressure to act from the highest authority in the US, government. In a secret White House meeting with Karamessines and Kissinger between 10.5 ml of 11.0 ml, and A.M. on October 13—the same day Visux had told agents in Chile that Schneider would be kidampped within brov-gigh hours—Prosident Nison explicitly reissued his orders to block Alkneif from becoming president. Alkneife to the president well two all his way to leaving the Oval Office, Karamessines later testified, "the president strott out [md] adds to reiterate the message." 20

Two days later, Nixon passed the same message to Ambassador Edward Korry who had been recalled to Washington for consultations. "That son of a bitch, that som of a bitch," the ambassador recalls the president swearing while striking his fix against his open palm as Korry and Kissinger entered the Ord Office at 12:54 FA. on October 1,5 When Nixon saw the perplexed expression on Korry's fise, the exclaimed; "Not you, Mr. Ambassador, it's data on of a bink Allende, We're going to smath him." Dr. Kissinger's note that the Agency should continue keeping the pressure on every Allende weak spot in sight—now, after the 24th of October, after 5 November, and into the future until such time as new marching orders are given. Mr. Karamessines stated that the Agency would comply.

Far from urning off Track II, Kissinger's marching orders were to continute the covert pressure "on every Allende weak spot"—up to the Congressional radioation and insugaration, and thereafter. In a cable the next day to the Santiago Station, Karamessines transmitted this redfirmed mandate, "[FUBELT] policy, objectives, and actions were reviewed a high USC level aftermoon 15 October. The cable ordered the Station to pass a message to Viaux—using the exact language that was worked out with Kissinger. The Station was to encourage him to "amplify his planning" and "join forces with other coup plotters." Headquarters ordered Hecksher to

On the evening of October 10, Valentusela advised, General Schneider would attend an army VIP "stag party" at the house of the commander-inchief of the army on Presidente Errazuria Street. As Schneider left the party he would be kidnupped. Schneider's abduction would begin the following progression of events to establish an anti-Allende milkary regime.

- After arriving at the house, Schneider would be abducted.
 He would be taken to a waiting airplane and flown to Argentina.
- Valenzuela would announce that Schneider had "disappeared."
- 3. Valenzateta would atatoutike that Schneider had disappeared.

4. The military would blame the kidnapping on leftists and would "institute a search for Schneider in all of Chile, using this search as a pretext to raid Communist-controlled poblaciones [neighborhoods]."

5. The military command would be shuffled to put coup plotters in positions of power.

6. Frei would resign and leave Chile.

7. A new military Junta would "be installed" headed by Admiral Hugo Tirado.

8. The Junta would dissolve Congress, (Doc 19)

To kidnap Schneider, Valenzuela said, the plotters would need to pay $50,000 to an unidentified team of abductors-money that the CIA Station subsequently authorized Wimert to provide.

The October 10 kidnapping attempt failed. Schneider's police security detail at the party was supposed to withdraw, allowing the kidnappers to act, but did not do so; instead of leaving in his official Mercedes, Schneider took his personal car and the abduction team "became nervous due to inexperience." the Station cabled. On October 20, Wimert's military contact reported that another kidnapping attempt was now underway. Schneider was to be intercepted while leaving the Ministry of Defense during rush hour. But the kidnappers got stuck in traffic and lost sight of his car.56 Headquarters requested that the station "continue to assure Valenzuela and the others with whom he has been in contact that USG support for anti-Allende action continues."

Late the next day, the six submachine guns and ammunition arrived via the embassy's diplomatic pouch-specially wrapped and falsely labeled to disguise what they were from State Department officials. (Doc 14) It took the Station almost twenty-four hours to arrange a clandestine transfer. At 2:00 A.M. on October 22, Colonel Wimert drove to a desolate spot in Santiago to deliver the weapons to a Chilean army officer waiting in his vehicle.

Only hours later, at 8:00 A.M., Schneider's chauffer-driven car was deliberately struck and stopped by a jeep as he drove to military headquarters in Santiago. Five individuals then surrounded his car; one used a sledgehammer to break in the rear window. Schneider was shot three times at close range. Despite emergency open-heart surgery, he died on the morning of October 25,37

The CIA's initial reaction to the shooting is reflected in the cold-blooded cable traffic between the Station and headquarters. Hecksher transmitted a report indicating some uncertainty about who was actually responsible but offering hope that the conditions were now propitious for a coup. "We know that Gen. Valenzuela was involved . . . but cannot prove or disprove that execution of attempt against Schneider was entrusted to elements linked with Vianx, he wroce. "All we can say is that stempt against Schneider is affording armed forects one last opportunity to prevent Allanch's election...". After briefing DCI Richard Helms, the Task Force directors Broc and Phillips sent back a cable of commendation: "The Station has done excellent job of guiding Chalenss to point today where a military solution is at less at oppoint for them. COS [and others involved] are commended for accomplishing this under externed wifficial and delicine circumstances." (Doc 14)

Covering up the U.S. Role

On October 24, 1970, the Cidican Congress overwhelmingly rainfied Subdon Allenda speciation. The voice continues 13, 53, which included all sevenys four Christian Democrat Senators and Congressmen, to thirty-seven votes from the Nationalists Party delegates for runner-up Jorge Allesmidi. Fair from footering a comp climate, the Schmeder shooting produced an overwhelming public and political repudiation of violence and a clear realifirmation of Chile's civil, constitutional tradition. The Chile's self-seving preferences of an obligatory Allende assassination or military move to take power proved to be quite incorrect.

For several days, Agency reports bemoaned that fact that "there are no indications that Valenzuela or Viaux's group are planning a coup before a November"-the date of Allende's inauguration. But most of the CIA's official attention after the assassination focused on a "security review" of FUBELT to ascertain its vulnerabilities to exposure. The declassified record shows considerable concern about news articles on the Schneider operation. based on sources inside the coup plotters' camps, that appeared in the Washington Post and Latin American press, including an extremely detailed and accurate expose in Pressa Latina published in Havana, Cuba, As conspirators, including Viaux, were identified and arrested, the CIA conducted a detailed assessment of the dozens of contacts and communications between the false flaggers, Wimert, Station personnel, the embassy, and Chilean coup plotters from late September and late October. The Task Force produced comprehensive chronological lists on "Contacts with Chilean Military," "Individuals Witting of Coup Attempt and Degree of Knowledge," and "Station Feelers and Contacts with Viaux Croup"-in order to anticipate and evaluate potential trouble spots and leaks.39

Two key problems concerned the CIA: first, that Viaux "may not want to be fall guy" for the killing and could implicate the U.S. One of the false flaggers, the Station determined, had given Viaux a written message that could potentially prove a U.S. role. Second and more importantly, a Chilean military officer still had the CIA machine guns, and ammunition that Colonel Wimert had given him-apparently hidden in his house. On October 20, headquarters requested that Wimert "manage to regain possession of material." But the Chilean official resisted, arguing that the guns might be useful in the future. He promised, according to one CIA memorandum of conversation, "to take special care in hiding hardware and remove telltale indicators of origin such as fingerprints." On November 4, Broe sent another cable reiterating the concern that U.S.-supplied "hardware could ultimately be discovered." This led Wimert to forcefully retrieve the weapons. "This equipment was subsequently returned to the Station," a CIA report cryptically concluded. Wimert also recalled that he was forced to pistol-whip Ceneral Valenzuela into returning the $50,000 supplied to pay the kidnappers.40 To dispose of the guns, as Wimert would later admit, he and Hecksher "drove seventy miles west, to the resort town of Vina del Mar, and threw the weapons into the Pacific Ocean."

In addition to destroying evidence, CIA Station officials received orders to lie in response to any allegations of involvement, even to other U.S. officials. If any "points of compromise" of the CLA's sects role in the Schnicker assositation surfaced in the press or through the Clahen government's investigation, headquarters warned in an October 28 cable reflecting the auxticy in Washington, "absolute dental will be the order of the day even with Ambassador and other embassy colleagues." "According so Bore and Phillias, the CLA's 'position will be stonewall all the way."

The snorwall strategy succeeded for four years—until investigative reporter Symour Hern blook the story of Track II and GA forfices to detabilise the Allends government on the front page of the New Teel Tison is September 1074. The revelations created an immediate political sentald, As the U.S. Senate Isundhed a majee investigation into CIA covert action in Chila, both the White House would claim ignoremer; the CIA would claim to claim to the White House would claim ignoremer; the CIA would claim to be following orders. Both would urge that they had disassociated the United Seates from the Visux group prior to the Schmider assessination and therefore Washinston was blundless.

In an August 12, 1075, dosed-door deposition, Secretary Kninger presented his sony that he had odth et CL do "stand down" on Project FU-BELT, shatting off coup plotting on October 15, 1970—a week prior to the Schneider shooting. Moreover, he assented, "we never received another report on the subject." After October 15, he dainted, "Track III was deed as for any office was occurred "a "kinsings, secording to the Granch Committee report, also "tenified that he was informed of no comp plan which keeps with the address of Central Schneider Andels operationally by Sear leaves which had also the Carroll Schneider (Alley and Search and Schneider) by Searples against Central Schneider, Kissinger was emphasic in his disavored: "I add I did not know."

But just nine weeks prior to his testimony before the Senate committee, in the privacy of the O'val Office, Kissinger acknowledged to President of that he had been briefed on the kidrapping plan and claimed that was the reason he turned off the Viaux plot. According to the SECENT/SONSS commemorandum of their conversation, the two were discussing Senator Church's investigation of U.S. sponsored assassination plots:

Predicts: I am concerned at Church trying to sensationalize by focusing on the assassinations. From what I am told, we made some clumsy attempts. From what I see, if he pushes it, it could make Kennedy look bad. But at the same time, it is so clumsy it makes ClA look bad. $\{\dots\}$ Kinsiger: I think if everything were known, Kennedy and Johnson did firm more than Sixon did. No since I have been there has there been anything even thought of. There was the killing of the Chilean chief of staff, but we had dissociated from that group when we heard they were plotting to hidnap him. [emphasis added]

Contrary to his testimony that his office considered Track II "dead" and received no post-October 15, reports on coun-plotting activities. Kissinger's office was kept informed of the flurry of events between October 18 and 22. The cables from CIA headquarters to the Station repeatedly referred to the need for information since "we must be prepared to advise higher echelons." Indeed, on October 10, between 3:30 P.M. and 4:30 P.M., Karamessines went to the White House to update Kissinger's deputy, General Haig, whose job was to rapidly pass such information to the national security adviser. That morning the CIA deputy director had received a detailed intelligence report from the Santiago Station outlining General Valenzuela's comprehensive plan-starting with the Schneider kidnapping scheduled for that very evening-for a coup. (See Doc 19) In secret testimony before the Church Committee, Karamessines noted that he would have shared this information with Kissinger "very promptly, if for no other reason than that we didn't have all that much promising news to report to the White House." Haig apparently asked to be quickly informed of any developments. In a cable to Santiago that night, the CIA's Chile Task Force requested that the Station provide a status report on "whatever events may have occurred night 19 October," and whether "ref action was aborted, postponed, or whatever," The cable noted that "Station will understand that HOS must respond during morning 20 Oct. to queries from higher levels"-the traditional reference to Kissinger's office.

At 4500 F.M. on October 22, eight hours after General Schneider was shor, Karamessines's calendar shows he met again with Haig at the White House. No records of this meeting and the briefing Haig likely gave to Kissinger have been declassified. But the meeting was clearly to discuss the Schneider showing and its impact on coup plotting.

The argument that Kissinger presented to protect the White House cast the CA as a verified regue deplant, persenting without substantiation as the Nason ordered Project FUREIT columinated in a flarry of comp plotting and community driving the week of October 57-22°. The CIA, Costing meetings with, and instructions from, both the president and this national security and writer, understood as clandenistic operations to hreve the fall backing of the civil control of the control of the

To distance itself from any culpability for this crime of state, the Agency drafted a series of nuanced, self-serving, postmortems about the Schneider killing. A secret overview titled "The Assassination of General René Schneider" and written as the Senate investigation into Track II began, claimed that the murder was "totally unplanned and unforeseen." Unplanned perhaps but certainly not unforeseen, the declassified records demonstrate. On two occasions the CIA's coup conspirators raised the possibility that Schneider might be killed. During a conversation between Hecksher and a high-ranking official in the Carabineros on October 8, according to the memorandum of conversation, they analyzed "available means to remove" General Schneider. "Abduction attempt might lead to bloodshed," they concluded, and as the military official presciently predicted, "Schneider's accidental death would rally army firmly behind flag of constitutionalism." In a meeting with a falseflag officer on October 16, a representative of Viaux's group asked for "sponsor's opinion about plan [to] import five Puerto Ricans to carry out kidnapping of Schneider." He "explained Viaux group did not like killing and that kidnapping might result in violence."

In a secret Ocober 1973 to briding paper, titled "Special Musclate from the President on Claff," the ClA attempted to everine FURELT history, force fully asserted that "the Visus group, acting independents)" that billed Schmicder. "To sum up, the tragic death of Central Schnicker resulted from a unalizaral kiding autempt taken on the initiative of the Visus group despite and against the advice of an Agency representative." This sugment ingioned the fact, well-documented in the ClA's own records, that Visus twas not citig independently or unilaterally, but desiry as a coccongision with Valcurated who had the unreserved support of the ClA'—support that included Syow one pay the klappie rum Visus and linea! "ClA deciminates written Syow one pay the support of the ClA' and the support of the "Valentack's group comp plan."
"Valentack's group comp plan."

ners so that they may act in concert. The final comp plot called for Viaus to handle the abdottom, using a small propo of extreme rightwing evidinar so that the crime could not be traced to the Calican armed forces; in the stermath of the kidnaping Velermach, Adminial Traso, and the excive-days military officers were supposed to take over the government. The initial list part attempt on Coulder 13, Châtea court records show, had been Velermach's idea and a collaborative effort—Valenmeth would make arm the greats saryed misside when Schneider left, and Viaux's heardmen would pursus Schneider when the departed. A Calican jusy determined that the same group that attempted the kildrapping on Coulder 1—gar of the plan that Valenzuela had described in detail to Colonel Wimert to be paid for by $50,000 in CIA funds—had shot Schneider on October 22. Both Viaux and Valenzuela were subsequently convicted of conspiracy to cause a coup.

To above itself from accommobility for what has come to be one of the most funous axes of policial assossimation in the history of U.S. covert op optical reasonismos in the history of U.S. covert op crations, the CIA dilignostly fostered the impression Lefore the Clarkell Committee that all connect with Vitury's forces had cased after Cockoes 18, when the Agency attempted to "de-fine" his plotting—four days hefer the shooting, as the law connects with Vitury's group qu'en the shooting, as well as covert efforts to observe lusiciae and thick the U.S. red in this effort.

More than twenty-five years after the Senate select committee published its report on Alleged Assassination Plots Involving Foreign Leaders, the CIA was forced to declassify a cable that showed that a "Viaux rep" had contacted the CIA in Santiago on October 24 with requests "that the group wants to see fulfilled 'based on your promises.' " Among them: "financial aid in resettling those of the group who have been identified with the conspiracy and who will have to leave Chile." Based on the concern that Viaux might "inculpate" Washington, the Agency had an incentive to help. In early November, according to a declassified November o cable from the Station, the CIA received intelligence that Viaux had "deposited detailed record of his activities . . . in safe custody abroad," and advised that "all bets are off if [Viaux] has to fight for his life." In a subsequent meeting at Langley headquarters, CIA false flagger Bruce MacMaster noted that several members of the Viaux gang were in prison and "there is a serious concern that one of these people now jailed in Chile will possibly implicate CIA in the action taken against Schneider." In a still classified memorandum of the conversation, MacMaster stated that he had recently met with a member of Viaux's group who was "seeking a large amount of money-somewhere in the neighborhood of $250,000 for the purpose of providing support for the families of the members of the group." According to MacMaster, the CIA "could probably get away with paying around $10,000 for the support of each family." (Doc 16)

The CIA did, in fact, pay "hush" money to those directly responsible for the Schneider assassination—and then covered up that secret payment up for thirry years. In a short paragraph, buried in a September 2000 report to Congress on CIA Adultific in Chile, the Agency conceded that

In November 1970 a member of the Viaux group who avoided capture recontacted the Agency and requested financial assistance on behalf of the group. Although the agency had no obligation to the group because it acted on its own, in an effort to keep previous contact secret, maintain the good will of the group and for humanitarian reasons, $35,000 was passed."47

At the time of the Schmicker association, only a handful of high U.S. official and CIA operatives bezwe that this amongs was set in motion by an explicit presidential directive for overet action to undermine Chileon democ. New, Unnwings of bown and why General Schmicker had once to be shot, the State Department recommended to Kinsinger that President Nison send a conductor, emessigne to Chile'o sunging president Estamol Feri, (Dox 17) "Dear Mr. Persident," reads the text of the most inosic document to be generated by Periger (FUBELT).

The shocking attempt on the life of General Schneider is a stain on the pages of contemporary history. I would like you to know of my sorrow that this repugnant event has occurred in your country. . . .

Sincerely,

Richard Nixon

Mr. Broe summarised the situation and highlighted some of the points in Ambassador Korry's cable. He noted that Korry is attempting to malesnin flexibility and that there is some, but not much, fluidity in the elituation. He pointed out that Frei is an essential cog to success in any action, congressional or military, to frustrate an Allande take-over and that Anhangador Entry is very passimistic about the groapects of Frei foing much more than deplaying Allende's electoral victory. He concluded that it is still too early to decide on a given course of nction and suggested that the Embessy and CIA field elements be requested during the next week to probe all possible aspects of feasible actions and forward recommendations as to what night be done.

In the lively discussion which followed, there was general surgement that more time to assess the situation was essential. It was also severed that there is now little likelihood of success in the energy usely proposed operation to influence the 24 October congressional run-off election sominst Allende.

Mr. Helms, noting that congressional action against Allende was not likely to succeed, offered his personal observation that once Allende is in affice it is predictable that the Chilean opposition to him will distringrate and collapse rapidly. He expressed the view that Allende will quickly neutralize the military and police after which there will be no effective rallying point for opposition against himadvocating it as a course of action, he observed that a military golps

July 2000 Probable Reaction to an Unsuccessful Viaux Coup.

A. Should General Roberto Viaux launch an unsuccessful military coup to deny Allende the Chilean presidency, the results could range from a quick sauffing out of his rebellious candle to a flaming civil war situation. But certain basic assumptions are valid without definition of the degree or circumstance of failure.

(1) Alleade would be forced to proclaim U.S. sponsor-ship of the comp attempt. He would be under considerable international pressure from anti-American elements abroad to denounce the movement as American-inspired. Consequently, U.S. prestige in Calle, Latin America, and the free world would be diminished.

(2) The Communist power-base would increase significantly. They would have the excuse to move quickly into control of what they considered power points, especially press, radio and television.

(3) Allende would attempt to consolidate his position within the military, thereby decreasing the prospects for a post-inaugural coup.

(4) Allende would exploit this situation by pressuring the political opposition (PDC, PN) to support his nationalisation program.

(5) Allende would call for an advance in any timetable of expropriation and would significantly increase his public attacks against the military and the U.S.

B. Even if Allende's long-range strategy is to achieve the aims of his program through a moderate approach, the combination and moderate.

of the above factors might force Allende to adopt a demagogic and nationalistic posture in the early days of his presidency.

- II. Allende's Probable Reaction to a Moderate U.S. Posture
- A. . Allende may find it difficult but not impossible to carry out a long-range program which could be bruited as yeas onable
- B. Allende would find a moderate U.S. posture a fertile atmosphere for carrying out a nationalistic program with ties to the West, especially in keeping his copper in the dollar markets and resisting pressures to drastically reduce (or break) diplomatic relations with the U.S.
- C. Allende might be able to take a more independent stance in resisting the Soviets and Cubans.
- III. Allende's Probable Reaction to a Tough U.S. Posture

Communists and leftists;

- A. Allende would find it extremely difficult to adopt a reasonable and moderate program for Ghile. He would have a reduced capability to impede the rapid political expansion of
- B. Allende's attempts to maintain dollar markets would not be significantly reduced by a tough U.S. stance. But internal pressure to greatly reduce diplomatic relations with the U.S. would be given added impetus.

5. It was decided by those present that the Agency must get a message to Viaux warning him against any precipitate action, In essence our message was to state; "We have reviewed your plans, and based on your information and ours, we come to the conclusion that your plans for a coup at this time cannot succeed. Failing, they may reduce your capabilities for the future. Preserve your assets. We will stay in touch. The time will come when you with all your other friends can do something. You will continue to have our support".

- 6. After the decision to de-fuse the Viaux coup plot. at least temporarily. Dr. Kissinger instructed Mr. Karamessines to preserve Agency assets in Chile, working clandestinely and securely to maintain the capability for Agency operations against Allende in the future.
- 7. Dr. Kissinger discussed his desire that the word of our encouragement to the Chilean military in recent weeks be kent as secret as possible. Mr. Karamessines stated emphatically that we had been doing everything possible in this connection. including the use of false flar officers, car meetings and every conceivable precaution. But we and others had done a great deal of talking recently with a number of oersons. For example, Ambassador Korry's wideranging discussions with numerous people urging a coup "cannot be put back into the bottle".

(Dr. Kissinger requested that conv of the message be sent to him on 16 October.)

8. The meeting concluded on Dr. Kissinger's note that the Arency should continue keeping the pressure on every Allende weak snot in sight - now, after the 24th of October, after 5 November, and into the future until such time as new marchine orders are given. Mr. Karamessines stated that the Acency would comply,

To begin at the beginning, MacMaster told me on 16 February 1971 that he was sent on a mission to Chile to recruit certain individuals for an action desirned to cause difficulty for the Allende Political forces in Chile MacMaster said that he had met with three or four individuals whom I eather were Chilean mulitary since he identified the key contact of this group as Erigadier General Roberto Wisux Marambio, former Commander of Army Rege of No. 1 in Antofagasta and former First Army Division Commander in the Chilean Armed Forces. Further, Enclaster stated that he ostensibly was representing American business interests such as the Ford Foundation, the Rockefeller Foundation and other unidentified bisiness groups. Nachaster introduced himself as a Columbian business and with the to the wrove-mentioned American business institutions. He did not no into any particular detail as to what his representations were designed to necomplish but said that the coal of his mission was to help create a situation which would encourage the Chilean military to activate a military take-over of the Chilean Government. He said that part of the theme he expressed to the group representatives he met with was that as a representative of American business interests he was most auxious to see the continuance of desocratic institutions in Chile. In other words, should the Allende forces assume governmental control in Chile, the forces of democracy would suffer a severe if not permanent defeat

Destabilizing Democracy: The United States and the Allende Government

Our main concern in Chile is the prospect that he [Allende] can consolidate himself and the picture projected to the world will be his success.

—Richard Nixon on why the U.S. had to "bring down" Allende,

November 1070

Whitin two days of Salvador Allende's imaguration, Periodent Nixon Convexed his entire National Security Council to discuss ways to "bring about his downfall." "We want to do it right and bring him down," Secretary of State William Rogers declared at the November 6, 1970, NSC meeting on Chile. The Secretary of Pofense, Melvin Land, agreed. "We have to do everything we can to hur [Allendel] and bring him down." The SECRET/SMINITY memorandum of conversation of this cabinet.

meeting—a privated document withheld from the Church Committee on the grounds of "executive privilege" and kept secret for thirty year—excords the unyielding White House commitment to undertaine. Calician democracy, as well as the reason for it. "Our main concern in Childs in the propose that he Allendel can consolidate himself and the picture proposed to the world will be this success," sussel Moon, providing the only candled explanation of his pasky to prevent the democracial election of a socialist from becoming a model be this success," sussel Moon, providing the only candled explanation of his fact and market that they can get may we wish this, that it's do it as pattle very. All over the world it's too much the fashion to kick to around, "the president continued. We committed the We contribute of the displacement," One I continued. We committed that the contribute of the provident continued. We committed the We content fail to ablow our displacement, "One I to grait the very."

After the failure of Project FUBELT, U.S. policy makers adjusted their strategy; but the goal of bringing Allende down remained. Rather than a small group of covert operatives trying to stimulate a military move in a short period of time, most of the U.S. government would now be involved in a long-term, expanded effort to destubilize the Chileran government—conomicuelly, point istuly, and militarily. "The question," as Kissinger's talling points for the NSC meeting called for him to say, "is whether there are actions we can take ourselves to interned," Allende's poolbears so that as a minimum be may full or be forced to limit his aims, and at a maximum might create conditions in which a collapse or overthrow may be feasible. "If forced intain was not talken, as Kissinger implied to Nixon's scheduler where he requested an hour to briff the president before the National Security Council members net. Chile "could end up being the worst failure in our administration—our Calls' ys 1972."

Kissinger's pressure on Nixon to take a hard file pedicy posture on Alheeds is revealed in an eighpayee White House brifeing poper tided "NSC Meeting, November 6," and classified succur/sussyruv. "The election of Allends as president of Chile pions for two mor of the most response subdruges ever faced in this hemisphere." Kissinger dramatically emphasized to Nixon. "Your decision so to what to do shout in sumy be the most historia and efficient foreign affairs decision you will make this year." Allende had been president foreign affairs decision you will make this year. "Alende had been president foreign affairs decision you will make this year." Allende had been president foreign affairs decision you will make this year." Allende had been president foreign affairs decision you will make this year." Allende had been president foreign affairs decision you will make this year." Allende had been president Nova—mong them "US. inversements cloudings own one billion delium?" that could be lost. More important was what Kissinger called the "insidious" "model effect" of Allende's democracies efection

The example of a successful elected Marxist government in Chile would surely have an impact on—and even precedent value for—other parts of the world, especially in lealy; the imitative spread of similar phenomena elsewhere would in turn significantly affect the world halance and our own position in it. (10c a)

Novoishanding this danger, Kissinger warred, the Sain Department be liked that Washington had no choice to to coesia with Allende because he was the legitimately elected learler of Clife and US, measures to oppose him would crause serious diplomatic damage of notrecies' image broad. Noon would now to overnide this position. 'It is essential that you make it crystal occur where you stated on this issuer' at the NSD meeting, Kissinger commeled: "If all concerned do not understand that you want Allende opposed as strongly as we can the result will be a steady differ forward the mode strong through the control of the

The clear position of Kissinger and Nixon, and indeed the very purpose of the November 6 NSC meeting, stands in sharp contrast with the many public representations that the president and his men would later make about the benign nature of the U.S. supproach toward Chile during the Allende years. Only a few months after ordering massive effects to undermite. At these of authinary term, Nonn thelay searced in his 1975 since of the Union address that "we are prepared to have the kind of feationality with the Chile moperument that it is perpared to have the kind of relationality with the Chile moperument that it is perpared to have with us." Four years after recommending a program of action against Allende that "might lead to ... his collapse or overthere," Kinsinger studied before the Sensate Ferrigo Relations Committee in September 1974 that "the intent of the United States was not obtainable or no substruct Allended but to keep in being populorial political particle... Our concern was with the election of 1976 and not at all with a point in 1974 to 1974 the studied by the present of the present of the present that the present the present the present the present the present that the present the present the present the present the present the present that the present the present the present the present that the present the present the present that the present the prese

This was, submitted President Ford in one of the most famous statements made regarding U.S. intervention against Allende, "in the best interests of the people of Chile and certainly in our best interests."

Cool But Correct: National Security Decision Memorandum 93

"We will be very cool and very correct, but doing those things which will be a real message to Allende and others." Nixon informed his aides on November 6. Presenting U.S. policy as detached diplomatic accommodation of the Popular Unity government while pursuing direct hostile actions designed to make it collapse, was a deliberate, conscious decision made at the highest levels of the White House. In the wake of the Schneider fiason and Allende's inauguration, as Henry Kissinger explained to the National Security Council, a high-level policy review had produced several options for U.S. policy: (1) to seek a modus vivendi with the Allende government; (2) implement an overt, hostile policy; or (3) "adopt what is in fact a hostile posture but not from an overt stance, that is, to move in hostility from a low-key posture." A modus vivendi was out of the question; Kissinger had already secretly lobbied Nixon against that option prior to the meeting." But a posture of overt hostility would be problematic. "Events in Chile," Kissinger told the NSC members, according to his talking points, were "taking a form which makes them extremely difficult to deal with or offset":

 Allende was elected legally and constitutionally. Therefore, he has legitimacy as far as Chileans and most of the world is concerned; there is nothing we can do to deny him legitimacy or claim he does not have it as a tactic for weakening him.

- b. He is unlikely to move things along lines which would permit us casily to marshal international or hemisphere censure of him . . . he will project Chile as an 'independent' socialist country, not as a 'communist government' or a Soviet puppet.
- c. We ourselves have traditionally espoused the principles of self-determination; we have stressed our opposition to the concept of intervention in foreign affairs. It would therefore be costly for us to act in ways that appear to violate those principles.³

For that reason, Kissinger urged, and Nixon approved, Option 3, which in innocaous burnenich languages state! "shiminin an ouwardly correct poure, but making clear our opposition to the emergence of a Communist government in South America; act positively to retain the initiative via-vis-viathe Allende government." A "cool that orrect" posture masking continuing efforts to subvert the Chilean government, Nixon determined, would guide U.S. polisy opiniar Allende.

"The merit of the non-over course," as Kininger had told the president, "is a that while it also unlikes the ame kinds of pressure and hossility is promises to increase their effectiveness by avoiding the risks inherent in public hossility." Those risks, U.S. polyer makers undersoot, included discreding Washing too among its principle allies in Barope and Latin America as well as serving too anong its principle allies in Barope and Latin America as well as serving "officer" on the first of the "officer of allies the Collines people around him in the face of the "forcip quest" for Soccepts of State Rogers, the Bureco of Inter-American Affairs appear has the present of the Kininger stated. Reduce our credibility throughout the world ... increase nationalism directed against us ... be used by the Allende Government to consolidate ist position with the Chilean people and to gain influence in the rest of the hemisphere ... and move the Allende Government to seek even closer relations with the USSR than it might have initially contemplated.

U.S. strategy for a broad range of low-profile pressures against Allende's government was tail out, at least partially, in National Security Decisional Memorandum pg., "Policy uoward Chile." In guarded bureaucratic language, the TOP SECURITY, SESSITIVE, PATS ON UN directive—Singule by Kisninger and distributed to CIA, State, Defense, the Joint Chiefs, and AID among other agencies—expressed the goal of U.S. policy: within "the connect of a publishy particle." cool and correct posture," the United States would "seek to maximize pressure on the Allende government to prevent its consolidation." (Doc 3) The measures identified in NSDM 93 reflected Washington's intent to isolate, weaken, and destabilize Chile until the country was ungovernable.

Among iss other provisions, NSDM 93 called for "vigorous efforts" to rally other Latta American nations to join the United States in isolation and undermining Allende's sociopolitical experiment, with particular focus and herall and Argentina. As enderenenen, Nixon authorized "dose relations with friendly military leaders in the hemisphere" who were considered allies against the left in the region—including the Chilen military.

NSDM ga also identified a range of economic measures designed to come the LS. efforts or "misch the economy sercum," as Nixon had perviously ordered. The directive stated that "necessary action be taken" to reduce and terminate current and future financing for U.S. exports and granuters for coporate investment in Callic Jobby private investon to cutral economic servicies, "but granum feeable induces" on the multilateral banks to cut their leading to Chie; and terminate bilateral economic aid programs. The Invisible Blockade

U.S. efforts to isolate Chile and quietly cutral blasteral and multilateral ecomonic support consumined an "irrainable blockade" against a country whose economy was deeply dependent on financial, industrial, and commercial re-lations with the United States. U.S. businesses generated wordurds of the 5x6 billion in foreign investment in Chile. Two major U.S. copper corporations. The U.S. Executive Director of the Inter-American Development Bank understands that he will remain uninstructed until further notice on pending loans to Chile. As . . . an affirmative vote by the U.S. is required for loan approval, this will effectively bar approval of the loans.

"We have instructed our representative to delay action on Chilean Ioans pending before the Inter-American Development Bank," Kissinger reported to Nixon in a mid-November, 1970, SECRET/SENSTITE "Status Report on Chile." "We are seeking the cooperation of the IBRD [World Bank] to similarly delay loans to Chile.""

At the World Bank, U.S. officials worked behind the scenes to assure that Chile would be disqualified for a practing 2s a million livescook-improvement credit, and for future loams. Predicibly, one sector of U.S. assistance rose during the Allready system. Usin military siles and assistance. "With regard to the Colleon million;" have are minimizing our million; misson on a business as usual "basis," Kisninger worst in a memorandum to Nixon, "in order to minimize miximum contacts with the Claine military." "

Kissinger also reported to the president that "on the conomic side" U.S. officials had "informed U.S. business and labor leaders of our discouraging view of developments in Chile." Since Chilera labor minors had a key role to play in aginting against Allende, on November 12, 1970, U.S. officials gave an "off-the-rocod briefing" in APICIO president Deorge Menuy, presumably discussing whatever influence and support the powerful union or ganization could provide in Chile Urough its international affiliases and the

With that presidential mondate, the U.S. took a hard-line position at the 107g and 107g Fairs Clob debt negleciations. Pressure was brought on major European creditor nations to join the U.S. in refusing to conclude a rescheduling of Chile's foreign debt. When the other European mations moved to renegotiate Chile's debt despite U.S. pressure, the Nroon administration broke ranks and refused to reschedule Chilean payments on more than $1 billion owed of U.S. government and private sector creditors.

The Nixon administration also attempted to isolate Allende's government diplomatically around the world. A SECRET/NODIS set of strategy papers, presented to Kissinger in early December 1970, reported on "USG consultation with selected Latin American governments . . to promote their sharing of our concern over Chell'. In his update to the periodent, Kaninger reported that "particular efficies are beling multi on countil with key countries under an Berall and Argentina through both diplomatic and milliony channels." For the CTA, a sitting Allende government provided a far broader target of opportunity than the brief transition priced in the fill of 1976. Toward that end, the CIA designed is covert operations to cruse and cancerbuse consoning, political, government, and military remises "no divide and weaken Allende." The "Covert Action Program for Clibit." submitted to Kningpre on November 17, vos "directed at the Allende government, the Callean Numed Porces, the non-Marsin opposition, the Chilera public, and other Laist American countries in an effort to mensime present on the other Laist American countries in an effort to mensime present on the President Nison, his national security adviser contined the "five principal elements" of the CLA's "Covert Action program—Chile."

- Political action to divide and weaken the Allende coalition.
 Maintaining and enlarging contacts in the Chilean military.
- Providing support to non-Marxist opposition political groups and parties.
 - Assisting certain periodicals and using other media outlets in Chile which can speak out against the Allende government.
 - Using selected media outlets [in Latin America, Europe, and elsewhere] to play up Allende's subversion of the democratic process and involvement by Cuba and the Soviet Union in Chile. (Doc 8)

The CIA Western Hemisphere chief, William Broc, presented this covert program to the 40 Committee on November 10. Kissinger, sounding more like director of Central Intelligence than the National Security Adviser, attempted to micromanage the operation. Casting himself as a "devil's advocate," Kissinger pointed out that the CIA's political operations against Allende's coalition focused on supporting moderates. Since Allende was "holding himself out as a moderate," Kissinger asked, "why not support extremists?" This would enhance the position of the most extreme groupspresumably the militant Movimiento Izquierdista Revolucionario (MIR)and, according to the talking points Kissinger carried with him to the meeting "disrupt Allende's game plan (i.e., maintain a moderate respectable image)." His talking points also called for Kissinger to emphasize that the goal of maintaining contacts and influence in the Chilean military was "not just for intelligence but for potential future action . . . obviously a very important elcment." When Broe stated that the CIA had acted on a practical proposal Kissinger had raised at the last 40 Committee deliberations-"that prompt steps be taken to procure escudos [Chilean currency] for possible future expenditures in Chile"-Kissinger questioned the amount of the fund.15 "Mr. Kissinger referred to the proposed stockpile of [deleted amount] in escudos and commented that this did not seem to be a very large fund to have on hand if stringent currency controls should be imposed," states deleted section "d." of the heavily censored minutes of the November 10 meeting.14 (Doc 6) He "raised this question because he did not wish the problem of a lack of operational funds in Chile to be used later as a justification for [CIA] not to be able to follow through on desirable actions."

Between 1970 and 1972 the CIA poured millions of dollars, and exendor, into extensive covert actions to underraine Allender. More than $5,9, million was funneled into opposition political parties and allied organizationa—nonly to influence municipal and congressional elections and but to "hoister and encourage opposition" to the Popular Unity government, as one CIA talking paper noted, and to incite major ongoing anti-Allende earnpaigns.

Political Operations

Since 1062, the Christian Democrat Party had been a leading recipient of CIA political operations in Chile as a beacon of democracy; after Allende's inauguration, the Agency poured covert funding into the party to transform it into a pro-coup force. On Ambassador Korry's recommendation, Kissinger summoned the 40 Committee to a special meeting on November 13 to approve funds-the amount remains classified-to be used to influence the party's political convention scheduled for early December. Washington's concern was not that Allende threatened the existence of the PDC; rather that the left-wing of the party, led by former foreign minister Gabriel Valdes, would win control away from the centrist faction and weaken what Kissinger's office believed was "the best potential source of organized opposition to the consolidation of the Allende Government." "As you know," Kissinger's aide Arnold Nachmanoff reported to him on November 12, Valdes "represents the group in the PDC that is prepared to accommodate to and cooperate with Allende." If it was "feasible to influence the PDC decision in favor of the Frei group," Nachmanoff wrote, "I would recommend approval of Korry's request." Based on conversations with his sources within Frei's camp, Korry sub-

When one considers Allende's superh policial performance during the first two months of his administration, and the speed and effectiveness with which the UP has moved to implement the most popular superior of its program, it becomes obvious that the UP goal of a popular electroal majority may be achieved in the April elections. Such a victory could encourage assent popular unity movements electiones in the hemisphere as well as dishesurening opposition and institutional forces inside Chile.

The Agency used hundreds of thousands of dollars of these appropriations to convert fund the operations of private-section organizations dedicated to undermining Allende's ability to govern. CIA officials would later testify that "financial support to the private sector was confined to specific activities..., such as voter registration drives and a get-out-the-vote campaign." In point of fact, as the CIA conceded to Congress in its September zoox report, "CIA Activities in Chile," the Agency "provided assistance to militant right-wing groups to undermine the president and create a tense conviousness." A number of the organizations receiving CIA support—disc included major associations of large and small businessment and unshellal organizations of opposition groups—directly supported, and wree closely alled with, try section finentings (consonic and social updecard, metally the truck coveres and strikes that paralyzed Chile in 1973. The CIA was well aware that "a substantial portion of the business community" was collaborating with groups dedicated to promoting violent disorder designed to "build a political atmosphere which would be propitious for a military coup." In an August 20, 1072, cable the Station reported on "efforts by Patria v Libertad and Business Leaders to Provoke a Coup." (During the Track II period, the CIA funneled $48,500 to Patria v Libertad, a self-proclaimed neo-fascist paramilitary group responsible for numerous acts of terrorism between 1070 and 1079; low-level covert funding continued through 1071.) P&L and a "large segment" of the business community. the Station cabled, "are undertaking actions to increase discontent and incidents of violence, especially in the Santiago area, in order to create an atmosphere in Chile which would be propitious for a military coup. The business leaders involved are trying to foment strikes and labor conflicts, while P&L will attempt to provoke incidents of violence." The collaboration of those organizations to foment disorder would continue until the coup finally took place.

The El Mercurio Project

The covert operation that, according to the CIA's own internal records payed "a significant ords" in bringing about a coup was calculative finding for the "E Marrais proges." The CIA informed the White House in early 1971, "publishing as that against Alloude attempts to antionistic banks, violation of press freedom, and land seizures." White CIA intelligence reports documented that the Edwards medic inquies restained its include; and ellerated proposition of Edwards medic inquies restained its include; and ellerated problems from its own mismanagement, or Cordi, and called boy problems, as well as a whereining cutodises, newsperint shortages, and labor unrest for which the Edwards and the CIA bilmed the Popular Unity overwinger.

In Spremher 1971, a representative of the Edwards media group requested "covert support totaling St million" from the CIA. The request prompted a significant internal debate among US, policy makers, In a security options paper the CIA presented to Kissinger on September 8, the agency suggested that the newspaper faced in "conomic squeeze" and passed on the position of Edwards or "six proprietors that "the paper media at least 51 million to survive for the next year or two." Washington Ind two 'basic oxions:

- A. To provide extensive financing for the newspaper with the understanding that this may not be sufficient to stop the Allende newsprint, or labor stoppages. This would involve an initial commitment of at least 5700.000.
- B. Allow El Mercurio to go out of business and arrange a maximum propaganda effort on the issue of freedom of the press. (Doc 7)

Opsion B was risky, the CIA advised, because "Allende might be able to counter that by demonstrating that it was B Memarin's financial impetitude which resulted in its closing." The CIA Station chief and Ambassador Korry Fouvord funding others within the administration believed that 81 million was "a very expensive price to pay for a little extra time" if the paper was going to close anyway.

Indeed, when the members of the 40 Committee were polled, each had a different position. Skinsinger's side, Arnold Nachmannell, regard we should probably take both options and link them." The paper would receive 590,0000 take both options and link them." representative, Adm. Thomas Moorer, stated "we were gambling with a loser and [the] expenditure [was] extravagant;" GIA director Richard Helms opined that "the prospects were not good either for the short or long term." Faced with a major disservement recarding a specific anti-Allende operation, Kissinger simply decided to "take the matter to higher authority." On September 14, in a rare example of presidential micromanagement of covert operation, Nixon personally authorized the $700,000-and more if necessary—in covert funds to El Mercuria. That evening, Kissinger called Helms to tell him that

(a) the President had just approved the proposal for supporting El Mararrio in the amount of $700,000, and, (b) the President wished to see the paper kept going and the amount stipulated could be exceeded if it would usefully serve that purpose.

Per the president's decision, Helms authorized his Western Hemisphere division to "Seceed the authorized $750,0000 and go up to, and even over, $1,000,000 provided it was warranted to keep the paper going." (Doc 8) The initial $700,000 was sent immediately in October, Kissinger personally authorized the additional $5,0000.

Seven months later, the CAI requested that "an additional Soft, soon be made available to J. Edwards"—a cover, "transfer" that swould bring total expenditures on the paper to S. 105, million in lates than a year." In a peoposal prepared by the new head of the Western Hensiphere division. Theodore Shackley, the CIA argued that the decision to continue funding "maste beaded... on a volve judgment of the importance of attermiging to ensure the paper's continued existence for political purposes." "The paper was no longer on the verge of being shatt down by the Allende government, but it was about to run out of credit. used to repay a loan, to cover monthly operating deficits through March 1973, and to provide for a contingency fund of [deleted amount] to meet emergency needs such as credit requirements, new taxes, and other bank debts which could come up on short notice."

El Merania, according to the CIA argument advanced for this money, was 'decimed essential' to belp CIA backed opposition candidates with the March 1973; Congressional election—a major electoral test of Allende's popularity. Now, as Kissinger aide William Jorden noted in a top secret White House "action" memoradum, the consensus was that "El Meranis" in important. It is a thorn in Allende's side. It does help give heart to the opposition forces."

And if, in the end, the newspaper did "go down the drain," Jorden reminded Kissinger, "we have an excellent 'freedom of the press' issue to use there and in the Hemisphere."  On April 11. Kissinger's office approved the funds.

Additional secret monies flowed to B. Mornis through the CAN's main copperate cellshearon in Children IIT Corporation. A declassified May 15, 1972 memorandum of a conversation between CIA officer Jonathan Hanke and ITT official Hal Hendrix recorded a discussion about 5000,000 bank depoints ITT was secretly making to Agastia Debrash. SHe had odd me money for the Edwards group went through a Swiss account," Hanke recorded to his susceiors.

Sustained by a massive influx of covert funding, the Edwards media engine became one of the most prominent acons in the downfull of Chilen democ nexy. Far from being a news outlet, El Mernir positioned itself as a buildhorn of conguitar deglation against be government, in the summer of przy, the CIA's Suniago Sustion identified El Mernir, along with the paramillary Partis y Libe and and milmatted elements of the Partido Necional as the main parties sector organizations that "have set as their objective ceration of conflict and confino atom which will also once not or ilmility intervalent." The CIA's West can Hemisphere covert scotte offersion excited the paper with a singular measurement of the confinence of the process of the confinence funding was necessary to reveal and sustain the propognetic and the confinence funding was necessary to reveal and sustain the propognetic outlets provided by El Mernir be learned only all facilities.

Prior to the coup the project's media outlets maintained a seardy barrage of anti-government criticism, exploiting every possible point of friction between the government and the democratic opposition, and emphasizing the problems and conflicts which were developing between the government and the armed forces.⁴⁹

In an admission that U.S. covert operations had directly contributed to the overthrow of Allende, the CIA asserted that the propaganda effort, in which Et Mercario was the dominant actor, "played a significant role in setting the stage for the military coup of 11 September 1973."

The Military Project

The Chilean military remained the "essential" player in Chile's future, according to assessments that CIA operatives in Chile repeatedly sent to Washington in one form or another. The Station placed tremendous emphasis on cover operations tegring the armed forces. For the first year following Allenei's election, the CAI invased considerable time and cliffor rebuilding its asset network—decimated by arress and purges of those involved in the Schouler's lilling—within the Chillean mende forces. The station rectuited a number of new agents inside the military with the goal of penetrating leading officer groups so that beyond be in communication with real and potential coup leaders, assuming that "the felderedl programs" end objective, a military solution to the Childen problem, must be sought within very certainly drawn guidelines. "We conceive our mission as one in which we work consciously and deliferately in the direction of a coup," the Sustion claded in November 1971, a position that headquarters cautioned was subject to conductive at commences. Given the dramatic fainter of "Frac III, both Langley and the transition of the contractive of "Frac III both Langley and the table introduction of contractive and the simulation of "Frac III both Langley and the table introductive themselves, that artificially simulated or ill planned precipious action would be counterproductive."

By the fill of 1971, the CIA Sation was conducting a "deception operaion," designed to convince the Chilem generals that Allende was secretly plotting with Castro to undermine the army high command, in order to "arouse the millary or "now operating fallenet if necessary by only 1972, the CIA was subsidizing an anti-Allende new-stere trageting the armed forces; and the Saniago Sation began compiling arrest lists, installation turgets, and other operational data necessary for coap contingues planning. In August 1072, the Suinto began sendine detailed lists of offerers

The first conrest "Intelligent Chinomison Special Regro" on coap piolong, distributed to DCI Helms and to Kissinger, was dated on November q of that year. In "Preliminary Planing for an Evenual Mikinay More Agipins the Chilean Government," the ClA reported, "senior Army, Navy, and Carabinero officers have decided on the overthrow of the Chilean Covernments some time in the apring of 1972." By that time, the plotters expected, the Chilean coromy would have determined sufficiently to provoke a state of emergency during which the military could move. (Doc q) in Murch 1972, the FIRI sent Kussinger a "proving" intelligence report on various regiments, nearly officers, fusions. The brothers in less of General Roberto Vision, the FIRI informed, Kussinger, were "servicy copgoil" in continuing the air-Malende activates of right-wing called throughout the Southern Come nations and "desired on convey the Energing information to the United States Covernments."

Intelligence gathering on pro-coup Chilean military officers brought the CIA, inevitably, to General Augusto Pinochet. Although Pinochet signed onto the September 11, 1973, putsch only days before it took place, U.S.

intelligence had him on their melte sevent of potential plotters as early as the summer of 1971. The CIA-ITT Scandal

As Nixon administration officials weighed the degree to which Washington might directly aid and abet a coup, their caution was certainly influenced by the breaking of a major political scandal on U.S. intervention in Chile-the first of a series of covert operations scandals that would plague the CIA throughout the 1970s. On March 21, 1972, columnist Jack Anderson reported that "secret documents which escaped shredding by International Telephone and Telegraph show . . . that ΓΓΓ dealt regularly with the Central Intelligence Agency and, at one point, considered triggering a military coup to head off Allende's election."17 "These allegations are astonishing," the Washington Post exclaimed in a lead editorial the next day. "How could it beif it is so-that in 1970 an American President could consider the possibility of acting to prevent the democratically elected president of a supposedly friendly country from taking office?" Unprecedented in their detail, the ITT records-twenty-four secret documents totaling seventy-nine pages of strategy papers, memoranda of conversations, and meeting notes-candidly charted the intrigue of covert corporate collaboration between the CIA, White House, and embassy officials to provoke economic chaos and subvert Chilean democracy in 1970 and early 1971.

In Châc, the revelations set off an explosion of nationalise indignation. The leiked documents bolsered a long-standing bleif among the Châlenn leif of U.S. conomic imperialism, and confirmed widespread suspicions of Washingson's coverel forths to theward the Châlenn socialists experiment. More over, with the publication of the secret papers, the fender of the Nixon's administrations' color but correct' dipotatise posture toward Châle was de-stroyed. I do not think it suffices to have a denial, which we got yesterday, by the Secretary of State of improper government conduct. If we leave it at that, the Committee would well be accused of being party to a cover-up. Some further action by the Committee is called for."

The next day, Sensor Fullright surbarized the exhibitionen of a special subcommittee on Miniational Corporations, and numed a then files known sensor from Islaba, Frank Chrurch, as chairman. With this major breach of secrecy in the midst of orgoning covert intervention in Chale, the Nixon administration went into crisic control mode. The exposure of Track I—in which I/T had played an active role—and Track II were at salke, as well as the continuing covert efforts to subvert the elected Chilena government. The marvelling of the ruth, as White House counsel John Dean would tell the ClA director, could be "rather explosive." Nixos: How the hell did that get out?

Zeigler: Well, Anderson got that from some source. Al Haig is sitting with me now.

Nixw: Well, he was—he [Korry] was instructed to. But he just failed, the son of a bitch. That was his main problem. He should have kept Allende from getting in.31

Full discloure of the Track I documenation would show that ITT had indeed "provided" is own extemporation by engaging in little and illegal intervention in internal Chilean politics. The corporation had approached the CAI in July 1970 and officierd a secret "election famil" to appose the conservative candidate Jorge Alexandri; is had conducted in own covers political operations inside Chile, among them passing funds to Alexandri through a secret channel provided by the CAI; ITT had urged the embassy to be more agreeave in blocking Allende, and compared with CAI officiate to desablize the economy and "soap Allende". "Our primary interests," as Meyer wrote, "are to avoid or to minimize disclosures that could severely compromise opposition forces in Chile and embarrass the Administration."

So, when OPIC requested that the State Department turn over "all traible information available to the intelligence community on the activities of ITT which could constitute 'provention." the State Department deried it had may. State Department lead witness Charles Meyer also lied to the subcommitice. Meyer, who was a key, if not particularly supportive, participant in 40 Committee deliberations during the Track I operations and who actively participated in decisions to clandesinely fund political parties and magnetize and magnetize that of the groups in Chile to implement NSDM 93, told Senator Charch under oath

The policy of the Government, Mr. Chairman, was that there would be no intervention in the political affairs of Chile. We were consistent in that we financed no candidates, no political parties before or after September 8, or September 4, rather... the policy of the United States was that Chile's problem was a Chilean problem to be settled by Chile.

Under questioning by Senator Charles Percy he continued

Let me simply say, Senator Percy, and with price, and I don't wan to hammer on this, that the policy of the U.S. government, despite all of the electricity in the air at any given point, remained noninterventionist. We neither financed candidates nor financed paries nor financed Alessantif gambias. "Nor tried to precipitae economic datos, and promored neither civil nor military nor any other coup. The policy of Chile's finute west Chile's."

But the most egregious effort to deceive the Senate, and the American positio, was underston by former Cld Aleicore Richard Helmer—conceivably the most knowledgeable official on covert operations to destabilize Chile^{2,5} After a long exerci in the Agency, in November 1937 Noon enrowed Helms as DCL². The periodent then nominated him to be US: ambassador to Iransa DCL². The periodent then nominated him to be US: ambassador to Iranbar On Federary 7, 1927, during dealbury confirmation hereings before the volume of the Confirmation of the Confirmation of the Confirmation of the Confirmation of Chile². and "Did you have any money passed to the opponents of Allende?" Helms answered "No. sir" to both questions. As the CIA itself would later admit, "some of the statements in Mr. Helms' testimony . . . seem not to be in full accord with the facts." Helms, as Multinational Subcommittee senior staff member Jerome Levinson reported to Senator Fulbright in a memo, stamped SECRET, "had been less than candid and there were several important questions which had not been raised." Levinson recommended recalling Helms because "the best way to get at the question of what really happened is through face-to-face questioning."50

Helms was called again, in executive session, before the full Committee on Foreign Relations on March 6, and swore "to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." Senator Fulbright turned over questioning him to Senator Church, whose staff had prepared dozens of extremely specific questions. As it became evident that Helms would not be able to get away with his usual method of evasive responses, Levinson recalls, Senator Symington managed to abort the hearing-but not before Helms had feigned forgetfulness and issued blanket denials. The following exchange took place:

Senator Church: Mr. Helms, did the CIA attempt at any time to prevent Salvador Allende Gossens from being elected President of Chile in 1970? Helms: No. sir.

Senator Church: Now, following the election, and up to the time that the Congress of Chile cast its vote installing Allende as the new President, did the CIA attempt in any way to influence that vote? Helms: Which vote?

Senator Church: The vote of the [Chilean] Congress. Helms: No. sir.

"Mr. Helms did not have to deceive us," Senator Church would later submit. "No one coerced him to commit periury. He could have said 'no comment.' "

When the Chile scandal over revelations of Project FUBELT exploded in the press again in the fall of 1974, the Justice Department under President Ford was forced to open a major investigation into "possible charges of perjury and obstruction of justice" by Helms. The Carter administration inherited the controversial case, and to avoid further embarrassing revelations at trial about CIA covert intervention in Chile, made a deal for the most minimal plea possible. On October 31, 1977, Helms made history. He became the first CIA director ever to be indicted for a crime. The Justice Department charged him with a two-count misdemeanor that he "did refuse and fail to answer material questions" before the Senate subcommittee. He pleaded nolo contendere and was fined $2,000.

Helms had been eaught, but neither punished nor chastened. "I were this conviction like a budge of honor," he old the press as his CA colleagues three him a victory party and passed the hat to risk the amount of his fine. Loss unide the Carter administration's rank to let Helms and the CAI off the hook was the importance and impact of his crime. Felms and other contracts the contract of the cont

The reality was quite different, as both ClA bendquarters and the Susidges Station understood. In the firm attorial test of its popularity since Allende took office, this Popular Units government had actually increased its electroit saregab—degice concerted CIA political eation, a massive overst mair. Allende propagnads campaign, and a U.S. directed socioeconomic destabilisation program. The UP program sail uppeals to a siteality portion of the Calienta electronic. Two belong reviewed in light of tallinguisting election results, which will caulde Allende and UP to push their program with recreeved vigor and crimissism."

The Sation, now under the direction of a new COS, Ray Warren, took a forceful position on what "fiture opionis" would be necessary. In a pievoid March 1.4 postmortem on the congressional elections, the CIA Station articulated plans to reinforce its focus on the military program. "We feel that during foreceable future, Station should give emphasis to fovertyl activity to widen our concaces, knowledge, and capability in order to bring about one of following situations."

- A. Consensus by leaders of armed forces (whether they remain in gove or not) of need to move against the regime. Station believes we should attempt induce as much of the military as possible, if not all, to take over and displace the Allende gove. . . .
- B. Secure and meaningful Scation relationship with a serious military planning group. Should our restudy of the armed forces groups indicate that would'be pleaters are in fact serious about their intentions and that they have the necessary capabilities, Station would with to establish a single, secure channel with such clements for jumposes of dislogating and, one basic data on their collective capabilities is obtained, to seek HQS authorization to enter into an expanded. . . . role: 1"

At the same time, the Station also reaffirmed the need to refocus attention on creating a coup climate—the long-standing goal of U.S. policy. "While the Station anticipates giving additional impetus to our [military] program" Other political power centres (political parties, basicess community, media) will play an essential support role in creating the political atmosphere which would allow us to accomplish objectives (A) or (B) above. Given the outcome of the election results, Station feels that creation of a renewed atmosphere of political unest and countrolled crisis must be achieved in order to stimulate serious consideration for intervention on part of the military.

The Station's gauge bo position, which clearly influenced its attitude and actions on the ground in Châle, was supported by a number of hard-liners within the Western Hemisphere directorate who pashed for a far more aggreasive, vident approach—an approach that cfairly did not count "avring democracy" in Châle as an objective. In a bald and blant internal challengs on the strategy of permiting policial operations, on April 17 a group of CLA officer sent a memorandum to WHIC Shaskley on "Policy objectives for Calle" calling for custing cover support for the mainsteram opposition parties. Such support "balled" those parties into believing they could survive until the 1170 election. Moreover, if the CLA helped the opposition Christian Democrats with in 1176, the authors aspued, it would be a "pythic victory" because the PICO would parsue kelfait 'communitation policies."

Instead, the CIA should directly seek "to develop the conditions which would be conducted to military actions." This involved "large-sale support" to the terrorist elements in Ciale, among them Partis' y Libertard and the "militant elements of the National Party" over a fact due frame—sa to nine months—"during which time every effort would be made to promote committe chaos, establish policies terrising and induces elimine of deperation to the committed of the control of the control of the control of the time. Healty, it would succeed in industing the military to take worth goterment connective."

But the position of the Station and the hardliness at Langley was not shared by the State Department, nor by key senior (2A) officials who four shared by the State Department, nor by key senior (2A) officials who lead the consequences of perceptions military scion and believed in the prudence of contine given the copying congressional committee investigation into 1TT and overt operations in Chile. There was disagreement on a number of fundamental and strategic questions.

- · Could the Chilean military be counted on to act against Allende?
- Should the CIA be encouraging violent demonstrations through covert funding of militant groups before knowing for sure that the military would not move to put down the demonstrators?
- · Given the current Congressional inquiry on the CIA in Chile, did the risks of exposure outweigh potential gains of working directly with the militant private sector and the Chilean military to sponsor a coup?45

These questions were discussed repeatedly as the process of formulating the Agency's Fiscal Year 1974 proposals and budget for covert action became grounds for a significant internal debater-kept secret for twenty-seven years—over the strategic nuances of U.S. intervention in Chile.

The State Department, led by a new Assistant Secretary for Inter-American Affairs, Jack Kubisch, opposed the Station's desire to foment a coup, through direct support for the Chilean military or collaboration with extremist private-sector groups. Along with Ambassador Nathaniel Davis, who replaced Edward Korry in mid-1071. Kubisch preferred to concentrate covert action on an opposition victory in the 1076 elections. In addition, CIA officers at headquarters, such as former Chile Task Force director David Atlee Phillips-who would return to Chile operations as the new chief of the Western Hemisphere Division in June-well remembered the Schneider fiasco, and remained skeptical of the Chilean military's commitment to a coup-Cables from headquarters to Santiago reflected their uncertainty over whether the Chilean military would be more likely to move against the government than to move against street demonstrators and strikers that the Station wanted to support. Promoting "large-scale protests such as a strike." cautioned a March 6 cable from Langley, "should be avoided, as should any action which might provoke military reaction against the opposition." In a March 31, 1073 budget proposal, "Covert Action Options for Chile-FY 1074," headquarters argued that Alabough we should keep all opions open, including a possible future copy, we should recognic that the ingedients for a succeedful coup are untilekely to materialize regardless of the amount of money expended, and thas we should avoid encounting the private sector to initiate action likely to produce either an abortive coup or a bloody civil war, action likely to produce either an abortive coup or a bloody civil war, the contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the key contract of the contract of the contract of the contract of the Armed Forces as well as the CODE [Citalent opposition democratic] parties, including the FDC.

On May 1, Langley sent a cable to chief of Station Warren stating "we wish to defer any consideration of action program designed to stimulate military intervention until we have more definite evidence that military is prepared to move and that opposition, including PDC, would support a coup attempe." The Chief of Station responded with a request that headquarters postpone its request for F1 1974 funding until the proposal could be redrafted to reflect current Chilean realities. "The most militum parts of the opposition." including ClA supported organizations such as El Mercario and the National Party, the Station reported, were mobilizing to forment a coup:

The planning focus and action of all the opposition forces is on the period immediately wheat of ther than on 1996. If we are to maximize our influence and help the opposition in the way it needs help, we should work within this tread rather than my to oppose and counter is by trying to get the opposition as a whole to focus on the distant and tenuous goal of 1976. In sum, we believe the orientation and focus of our operational effort should be on military intervention.

On Agal 10, the Western Hemisphere division did secure the approval from CAI director James Schleiniger for "succlearated fortos against the military target." These covert actions, according to a May 7 menorandum to Schleiniger from Mrd division chief Theodored Stakkey, were "designed to better monitor any coup plotting and to bring our influence to beer on key military commanders to that they might play a decisive role on the side of the coup forces when and if the Californ military decides on its own to act against Allende." Dec 131 Hendquarents annobried the Statings Station in" move theed against military target in terms of developing additional sources," and approximate to a capporationates for acceptable military topogram when "we have much more solid evidence that military is prepared to set and has reasonable chance of queeceding." (Doe 14) Later that viby, Kinsinger sent Nixon another menn, "Attempted Chikom Rebellion Ends," noting that "the comp itempte was an industed and poorly coordinated effort," and that the teaders of all three branches of the military "reminical loyal to the operation of the contract of the chikon of the

This ongoing internal debate led to a delay in approval for the CIA's FY 1974 covert action budget as the CIA and the State Department worked out compromises on how funding authorizations would be used in In late July, the CIA reported that a coordinated coup plan was "near completion." The plotters were still dealing with the Prast problem; only way to remove Prais, "the Station mored, "would appear to be by abducion or assissaination. With the memory of the affair of the former fails of the former former of the affair of the former to be print themselves to convent out the state of the objects to brine themselves to convent out and mark."

The CIA also reported that the military was attempting to coordinate its takeover with the Truck Owners Federation, which was about to initiate a massive truckers strike. The violent strike, which paralyzed the country throughout the month of August, became a key factor in creating the coup climate the CIA had long sought in Chile. Other factors included the decision by the leadership of the Christian Democrats to abandon negotiations with the Popular Unity government and to work, instead, toward a military coup. In a CIA "progress report" dated in early July, the Station noted "there has been increasing acceptance of the part of PDC leaders that a military coup of intervention is probably essential to prevent a complete Marxist takeover in Chile. While PDC leaders do not openly concede that their political decisions and tactics are intended to create the circumstances to provoke military intervention. Station [covert] assets report that privately this is generally accepted political fact."45 The Christian Democrat position, in turn, prompted the traditionally moderate Chilean Communist Party to conclude that political accommodation with the mainstream opposition was no longer feasible and to adopt a more militant position, creating deep divisions with Allende's own coalition. The military's hard-line refusal to accept Allende's offer of certain cabinet posts also accelerated political tensions. "The feeling that something must be done seems to be spreading." CIA headquarters observed in an analytical report on "Consequences of a Military Coup in Chile."

The resignation of Commander in Chief Curlos Prats in last August, after an interne public arear camping to by B Harmin and the Chilean right wing eliminated the final obasade for a nucreatial coup. Like his per decessor, General Schweider, Paris had updel the consistentian rise of the Chilean military, Bucking younger officers who wanted to minercan Chief a policial process. In an Angust 25 intelligence report namped "ror secure viouse," the Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA) noted that the department of Paris Nar control de main factor minigating against a coup." On August 31, LSA military parties within the Chilean samy were region as couple commanders have pledged their support. Efforts area said on the undercovey to complete coordination summing the three services, but no date has been set for a soon patterne."

By then, the Chiesen milistry had established a special coordination team made up of their expresentatives of each of the services and carefully selected right-wing civilians. In a series of secret meetings on September 1 and z, this team persented a completed pain for overthrowing the Allende government to locate of the Chilean sumy, air force, and tany. The inciper junta rapproved the plan and set September 1 on she target aften for the coup. According to a review of coup plotting obtained by the CIA, the general who replaced Garlos Para as commander in their General Augusto Pluedset, was "aboven to be head of the group" and would determine the hour for the coup to begin."

On September 8, both the CIA and the DIA alerted Washington that a comp was imministen, and confirmed the date of September 10. DIA intelligence immunary samped row securit UMBAR experted that "the three services have reported was great to move against the government on no September, and civilian terrorisa and right-wing groups will allegedly amp out the effort." [One 17] The CIA reported that the Calitae many would not assure to workflow one government" at 8 yes, Ast. and September 10 or has the base of the start of the same will not oppose the many's section."

On September 9, the Station updated its coup countdown. A member of the CIA's covert agent team in Santiago, Jack Devine, received a call from an asset who was fleeing the country. "It is going to happen on the eleventh." as Devine recalled the conversation. His report, distributed to Laugley headquarters on September 10, stated.

A coup attempt will be initiated on 11 September, All three branches of the Armed Forces and the Carabineros are involved in this action. A declaration will be read on Radio Agricultura at 7 A.M. on 11 September. The Carabineros have the responsibility of scizing President Salvador Allenon.

According to Donald Winners, a CIA high-runking agont in Chile as the time of the coap, "the understanding was they (the Chilean milliary) would do it when they were ready and at the final moment tell us it was going to abspepa." On the ewe of the punch, bowever, at least one scene of the coap plotters became nervous about what would happen if fighting became protracted and the lackword dain of any selamed. On the might of Segmenter 10, as the military quirely assumed positions to violently take power the next day. In Washington the next day, CIA director William Colly sext a memo to Kisinger, submitting the Sation's arguments—word for word—and requesting suborization to move forward with the funds. The memo, "Proposed Covert Financial Support of Claimer Prisus Sector," used Impusing designed to assuage State Department sensitivities. "The Satintings Station would not be working directly with the armed forces in among too bring about a coup nor would ris support to the overall opposition forces have this air reard," Colly submitted. But he added this execute "Eckhistically, of course, a comp could result from increased opposition pressure on the Allende government." (Due 16)

By then, the CIA had multiple, and promising, resports of comp plotting, in mid-August, CVMID Phillips had dispatched a veterran agent to Santiago to assess the situation. He childr back that "in the past several weeks we have again received interested reporting of plotting and have seen a variety of dates lated for possible comp attempt." One report moted that milisary plotters had chosen hy? as the "variety for four another comp attempt, but plotters had chosen hy? as the "variety for four another comp attempt, but plotters had chosen hy? as the "variety for the four another comp attempt, but in Chief Carlos Prass, as well as the difficulty in luning up "the key Army regionsts in the Stansings seen," According to the CIA source;

The officer was assured that his question "would promptly be made known to Washington," according to a highly classified memo sent by David Aldee Phillips to Henry Kissinger on September 11, as the coup was in progress. (Doe 18)

At the time of the coup both the State Department and the CIA were making continguous plants for U.S. assistance if the military more appeared to be failing. On September 7, Assistant Secretary Kubbish reported to State and CIA officers that their libered department of limits in the diseased CIA officers that their libered department of intoin the diseased CIA in and externment the following: "If there should be a comp attempt, which appears likely to be necessful and unifactory from our samplesiant, we will sum of the control of the contro
